THE WITCH of ENDOR:

OR, A

PLEA

FOR THE

Divine Adminiſtration

By the Agency of

GOOD and EVIL SPIRITS.

Written ſome Years ago, at the Requeſt of a Lady; and now Reprinted with a Preſatory Diſcourſe, Humbly Addreſſed to the Honourable Members of the Houſe of C——s, who brought in their Bill (Jan. 27) for Repealing the Statute of 1 Jac. Cap. 12. concerning WITCHCRAFT.

— Leſt haply ye be found even to fight againſt God.
Counſellor Gamaliel's Advice, Acts v.

LONDON

Printed: And Sold by John Millan, next [illegible] Coffee-Houſe, near Scotland-Yard; and J. Roberts, near the Oxford-Arms, in Warwick-Lane 1736.

[Price 2 s.]

CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
The President White
Library
RECEIVED 1891.

A. 768.
mc

Oates, Titus

To the HONOURABLE

Members of the Houſe of Commons, Mr. CONDUIT, Mr. CROSS and Mr. HEATHCOT.

GENTLEMEN,

YOU have been lately told, by a Writer of very great Diſtinction, * That Diſtance of Time makes a great Alteration in Religion, as well as Languages; which, if true, may poſſibly ſerve, in the beſt Manner, to juſtify your preſent Proceedings relating to Witchcraft: For, otherwiſe, what can be ſaid for thoſe renowned Sages of the Law, ſuch as Lord Chief Juſtice Coke, Lord Chief Juſtice Hale, &c. who, with all their Learning, Good Senſe, and Solid

* See the plain Account of the Nature and End of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, p. 8.

Judgment, are now to be recorded as ſad Inſtances of Human Frailty; and are become, in one Reſpect, as much the Subject of your Pity and Deriſion, as they formerly were of your profound Veneration, in all Points of our Engliſh Law.

'Tis ſaid, that this intended Repeal of the Statute of 1 Jac. C. 12. took its Riſe from the ſame zealous Principle, that now animates and diſplays itſelf in ſo ſignal a Manner, for preſerving the many Lives of His Majeſty's good Subjects, which might otherwiſe periſh by a weak Judge, and an ignorant Jury; as alſo for reſcuing all of us in general, (ſuch as paſs under the Denomination of Proteſtant) from the grievous Oppreſſion of ſuch Relicts (as I ſuppoſe you take Witchcraft to be) of Popery and Superſtition: And yet it has ſo happened, Gentlemen, that, during the long Reign of Queen Elizabeth, of glorious Memory (who, you will agree, neither wanted wiſe Senators, nor able Counſellors; and, conſidering the many Thunder-Claps they had to annoy them from the Vatican, it may be reaſonably thought, their Spirits were the more irritated, and conſequently that the Work of Reformation went faſter on). I ſay, during that long Reign, Witchcraft was not deemed a Relict of Popery. And when, after the Queen's Demiſe, the Legiſlature had Reaſons (which I ſhall not trouble you with) for making Alterations, by repealing the 5th of Queen Elizabeth; you will pleaſe to obſerve, they made no Alterations, as to their Notions

of

of Witchcraft. They ſtill conſider'd it as an Offence Capital immediately againſt the Divine Majeſty, and therefore made the Puniſhment Felony, as being firmly perſuaded of the real Nature of the Offence. Nor were our Senators, in ſucceeding Reigns, hardy enough (pardon the Expreſſion) to debate the Operations of the Intellectual World: For they were convinced (and, upon ſuch Conviction, they ever declined ſuch Debates) that Infinite Wiſdom and Power has made it as great a Secret to his Creature Man, HOW, or in what Manner his Miniſtring Spirits (for Good or for Evil, to Reward or to Puniſh) do communicate with us in this ſublunary World, as He has that of Soul and Body's operating on each other. You will not queſtion the latter Operation, becauſe 'tis Fact too notorious. And give me Leave to add, that, without the Help of ſuch a Divine Spark within your own Breaſts, you could not ſo much as carry on your Debates on the former.

My Lord Chief Juſtice Hale (Gentlemen) in his Pleas of the Crown, gives the following ſhort Analytical Account of the Statute concerning Witchcraft. " At Common Law, ſays he, " Witchcraft is puniſhed with Death, as Here- " ſy was, by Writ de Heretico comburendo. *

---

* My Lord refers to Coke's Pleas of the Crown, Cap. 6. which I don't doubt, but your Worſhips have conſulted, and pity'd his Underſtanding and Knowledge too as well as the other's.

" The

" The Statute of 1 Jac. 12. is the only Law " now in Force againſt it, and divides it into " two Degrees. Witchcraft in the firſt Degree " made Felony without Benefit of Clergy, inclu- " ding four Sorts or Species.

" I. Invocation or Conjuration of an Evil " Spirit.

" II. Conſult, covenant with, entertain, em- " ploy, feed or Reward any Evil Spirit to any " Intent, tho' no Act be done thereupon.

" III. Take up any dead Perſon, or any Part " thereof, to be employed or uſed in Witch- " craft, Charm, &c. though not actually uſed or " employed.

" IV. Exerciſe any Witchcraft, Inchantment, " Charm, or Sorcery, whereby any Perſon ſhall " be killed, deſtroyed, conſumed, or lamed in " his or her Body, or any Part thereof; which " requires the Act to be done, viz. laming, " conſuming, &c.

" Theſe, and all acceſſary before, to ſuffer " as Felons without Clergy: But Acceſſaries " may be after; but then they have Clergy, " becauſe not ſpecially excluded.

" Witchcraft in the Second Degree;

" I. To take upon them by Witchcraft, In- " chantment, Charm, or Sorcery, to tell where " Treaſure is to be found: They that take up- " on them to do it, though they cannot, yet " within this Law.

" II. Or

" II. Or where Goods loſt or ſtolen may be " found.

" III. Or to the Intent to provoke any Per- " ſon to unlawful Love; theſe Clauſes come " under the Word (taking upon).

" IV. Whereby Goods or Cattle ſhall be de- " ſtroyed; which requires an actual deſtroying, " and not a bare taking upon them.

" V. Or ſhall uſe Witchcraft, &c. to hurt " any Perſon, though the ſame be not effected. " The Puniſhment of theſe, 1. The Firſt Of- " fence a Year's Impriſonment and Pillory. 2. " The Second Offence, Felony: But this re- " quires, 1. An actual Conviction and Judg- " ment for the Firſt. 2. The Second Offence " muſt be committed after the Judgment for the " Friſt. The like in Forgery, Tranſportation " of Sheep, &c. But the Conſequents upon an " Attainder, viz. Corruption of Blood, and Loſs " of Dower: But during Life, the Lands for- " feit. And note, A Saving againſt Corruption " of Blood, preſerves the Deſcent; and Saving " of the Land to the Heir, prevents Corruption " of Blood."

But, Gentlemen, ſhould the greateſt Ornaments of the Long Robe have hitherto been miſtaken in not judging of this Statute, in the Manner you do; yet, 'tis humbly preſumed, you think as they did, as to the Intellectual World in general, though you cannot allow of ſuch its Operations upon the Material One. One of your own Side of the Queſtion, a Clergyman, now a Biſhop

Biſhop in Ireland, is even poſitive (and I make no Doubt, but you will confirm it in the Preamble of your Bill) when he tells his Three Right Honourable CHIEFS, That 'tis a Point very certain, that the ſober Belief of good and bad Spirits is an Eſſential Part of every good Chriſtian's Faith. * I readily grant, the Illuſtrious Triumvirate eaſily admitted his Point to be very true; but, I muſt think, they ſtill widely differed from him; or, rather, judged it inconſiſtent with ſuch a Belief, that all Communications ſhould be reckoned Imaginary, and that the Intellectual World ſhould not ſerve the Purpoſes of an Almighty Being, in rewarding or puniſhing according to the Divine Appointment. And I am the more inclined to think ſo, becauſe They, whom, by his Dedication, he imagined might become his Patrons in ſuch Sentiments, never altered their Notions, during the whole Courſe of their Lives (ſo far as I have heard) as to the Fundamental Part of the Statute, which you are now going virtually to Repeal: And tho' they were known to be as ſtrongly attach'd to the Proteſtant Religion and Intereſt, as yourſelves can poſſibly be, yet they could not entertain even a Thought of having the Statute ſo Repealed; nor conclude (as the Biſhop does) That Communications from the other World ſhould be deemed the Spring both of the worſt Corruptions of Religion,

* Dr. Hutchinſon's Hiſtorical Eſſay concerning Witchcraft, in his Dedication

gion, and the greateſt Perverſions of Juſtice. I wiſh, that Right Reverend, ſince he was pleas'd to annex his two Sermons to his Hiſtorical Tract, (with an Intent, no Doubt, of better reconciling his jarring Notions about this Affair) had forbore mangling an excellent Collect of our Church; (a) which, as 'tis grounded on the Holy Scriptures, ſo it ſtands, and I hope, will ever ſtand, ſupported by the Legiſlature. What need was there of that little Variation, (as he calls it) in ſtriking out the Words, That, by God's Appointment, Angels may Succour and Defend Us, and placing in the Room of them, Aſſiſt and further us in the Race of all Goodneſs? He knew very well, that St. Paul has inform'd us, that we ought to beg this Succour and Defence from Good Spirits; that we may be able to Wreſtle (not only againſt Fleſh and Blood, tho' that's a pretty difficult Task we all find; but) againſt bad ones; to defeat the Wiles, and manifold Aſſaults of Principalities, and Powers, of the RULERS of the Darkneſs of THIS WORLD, SPIRITUAL WICKEDNESS in High Places. (b) The Biſhop muſt know, how Strong the Original Words are againſt his Notions. With what Intent cou'd St. Paul call theſe Powers κοσμοκρατορας, but to ſignify, that we might too often become their Vaſſals, if we did not take Care? And what are the τα πνευ-

(a) Collect appointed for the Feaſt of St. Michael and all Angels.

(b) Eph. vi. 12.

μαλικα

μαχὴ τῆς πονηρίας, but what ſtands explain'd in the Margin of ſome of our Bibles, viz. Wicked Spirits? There is a πάλη, a Struggle then againſt their Efforts; and if ſo, there muſt be ſomething more than an Imaginary Communication, as the Biſhop ſtiles it. In ſhort, the very Cloſe of the Biſhop's Sermon could not poſſibly lead him to make ſuch a little Variation, (as he calls it) but it leads, rather, to make none at all, agreeable to this Paſſage of St Paul. The Biſhop's Words are theſe—Their Concern, i.e. of good Angels, about our Souls, ſhews the Value of them; and from their Concern about them, let us learn Judgment, and encreaſe our own Care; and take Heed ſo to order our Lifes, that they may not be conſign'd to that State, which God hath prepared for the greateſt of thoſe Evil Spirits, and all his Inſtruments of Evil. How juſtly might St. Paul's Words of Exhortation have follow'd — Wherefore put on the whole Armour of God, that ye may be able to ſtand againſt the Wiles of the Devil; for we wreſtle not, &c. But the Collect was rather to be altered than the Text; and a little Variation in the latter, wou'd not have paſs'd ſo eaſily, as in the former; tho' the Collect manifeſtly comprehends the full Meaning, and Purport of the Text itſelf; and the Force and Energy of the Words in our Collect are loſt, when the Words (otherwiſe Pious and Good) are put in their Room, viz. Aſſiſting and furthering us in the Race of all Goodneſs,

Permit

Permit me, Gentlemen, to dwell a little longer upon theſe Words of St. Paul, (a) becauſe they will rather guide than miſlead you in the Work you are about: And, as 'tis a Work of no ſmall Importance, it will not be taken amiſs, if I remind you of Gamaliel's Advice likewiſe. When the Goſpel of Chriſt was Preaching, (which ever condemns Witchcraft, and Sorcery; Μαγεία, Acts xiii, 6, 8, 10. φαρμακεία Galat. v. 20, however you, our Repreſentatives, ſhall pleaſe to determine the Affair within Doors) he had ſuch a ſtrong Impulſe on his Mind, of an overruling Power, that he thought it proper, tho' a Few, and a great Enemy to the Apoſtles, to let them go on Preaching the Myſterious Doctrine of the Reſurrection: tho', you know, St. Paul had no other Treatment at Athens, (when he did the ſame Thing,) than that of a Babler. But, ſays the Doctor of the Law, (νομοδιδάσκαλος) Take heed to yourſelves, &c. The Fathers, Gentlemen, were Men of great Learning, as well as Piety, and Integrity; and therefore may juſtly demand your Attention in this Affair: They were by no Means Strangers to Metaphyſicks; but, yet, did by no Means preſume to make ſuch Diſcuſſions, and Altercations, about the Nature of an Immaterial Being (not excepting God himſelf) as ſome of our Moderns have ventur'd to do: (b) One of them has told you (and (a) Eph. vi. 12.

(b) See thoſe inſufferable Debates with Mr. Lawes, about the Immenſity of God, &c.

a hardy one he is, for which, I ſhall ask no Pardon) that you are to conceive of the Divine Subſtance, as being extended; and if extended, our Faculties, which God has given us, muſt ever be at a Loſs to conceive of ſuch Divine Subſtance, otherwiſe, than as Material; and conſequently, what muſt be the Being, that he wou'd have us to make the Object of our Worſhip? (a) "Since God, ſays he, is ſome Way or "other preſent every where, it follows that his "Subſtance, for without Subſtance he cannot "be preſent at all, it follows, that his Subſtance "muſt exiſt every where; and, conſequently "have an infinite Expanſion. As God cannot "be preſent where his Subſtance is not, ſo neither can he Act where his Subſtance is not. "His acting without Local Preſence is acting "no where, or without Exiſting, if exiſting "no where is the ſame as not exiſting." What ſhall we ſay, Gentlemen? Shall ſuch Arguing as this, about the Almighty, be any longer ſuffer'd in a Chriſtian Country? What ſays the Royal Prophet? (I am perſuaded, you believe both the Prophets and Apoſtles too) Whether ſhall I go from thy Spirit, (b) or whether ſhall I go from thy Preſence, &c. My Reins are Thine, (my Thoughts, and my very Soul are Thine, open and naked to thy All-ſeeing Eye). David did not want Philoſophy, when he thus

(a) Ib. Page 106, &c.
(b) Pſalm 139.

ſpake

ſpake of the Infinite Being; and had the Author, juſt mentioned, ſtudied his Bible more, and leſs concerned himſelf in vending ſuch impious metaphyſical Jargon; he might have form'd from thence the trueſt, and therefore the beſt Notions of the Immenſity and Infinity of the Divine Nature; ſuch as all the Metaphyſicks, whether of the ancient or modern Schools, muſt be allowed to fall ſhort of. But, Gentlemen, tho' it muſt needs be that Offences come, yet, I hope, I am not to remind you, that therefore you ought to be the more circumſpect. 'Tis impoſſible, ſuch imaginary, vain, ſandy Links of Argument, can long detain or lead Captive Perſons of that known good Senſe, the Almighty has been pleaſed to give you. Don't be offended if a Church of England Prieſt has told you (as he does in expreſs Terms) in a very groſs Manner, (a) as to the Nature of Spirit in general; "As every Body's Sphere of acting is confin'd "(ſays he) to its Surface, without and beyond "which it cannot act; ſo every Spirit's Sphere "of acting is confin'd to its local Preſence, with-"out and beyond which it cannot act. And "this Sort of Philoſophy is demonſtrative, he "ſays, or elſe nothing is ſo." But I ſpare him, unwilling to take up too much of your Time. Had the good Primitive Fathers, I juſt now mentioned, talk'd after this Manner, they muſt have laid aſide their Bible, as this Gentleman (to his

(a) Ibid.

Shame)

Shame) ſeems to have done ; at leaſt to any good Purpoſe ; and thoſe Venerable Lights of the Chriſtian Church might juſtly have deſerv'd your Cenſure : But they talk quite otherwiſe upon this Matter, conſiſtently with the Tenour of the whole Scriptures.

One of them, diſcourſing upon this Inſtructive Paſſage of St. Paul (Eph. vi.) concerning the Operations of Evil Spirits, when he remarks upon the 11th Verſe, where we are exhorted to put on the whole Armour of God, ſays thus ; " The Apoſtle does not ſay, we are to put on " this Armour, in Order to enter the Liſts (as " Warriors do) with theſe Inviſible Enemies ; " but rather that we fortify our Minds againſt " their Cheats and Deluſions ; (ὐ πρὸς τὰς μά- " χας, ὐδὲ πρὸς τὰς πολέμους, ἀλλὰ πρὸς τὰς μεθο- " δείας, &c. ſays St. Chryſoſtom, Hom. 22. in " Epiſt. ad Eph.) For the Enemy we have to " deal with, does not wage War openly, but " after an inſidious, treacherous Manner ; which " is the Import of the Word μεθοδείας made " Uſe of by the Apoſtle (which we tranſlate " Wiles) conſiſting in the various Arts and " Communications which they are made capa- " ble of exerciſing amongſt us. There are " many Ways, ſays the ſame Father, (a) where- " by the Devil circumvents the Indolent and " Secure. " Tertullian, who was once an Eminent Lawyer, you know (Gentlemen) even in the Second Century, where he is talking upon this very Paſſage of St. Paul now before us, (Eph. vi. 12.) renders κοσμοκράτορας, ſometimes Mundi-potentes, at other Times Mundi-tenentes, implying, that, by the divine Permiſſion, they were in Poſſeſſion of this Sublunary World; agreeable to which, the moſt Learned, whether Ancient or Modern, do generally aſſign the Regions of the Air between us and the Moon, to be the chief Place of Reſidence for theſe Evil Spirits. (a) It was, in Alluſion to this Paſſage of St. Paul, that Minutius Fœlix, in his Dialogue (wrote at the very Beginning of the third Century between a Chriſtian and a Jew) ſays, "Our being ſenſi-"ble of, and ſuffering under the Infirmities or "Failings of human Nature, is not to be inter-"preted properly a Puniſhment, ſo much as a "Warfare. (b)" And the ſame Eminent Father, I have cited already, ſays, 'Tis ſuch a Warfare, that admits of no Truce or Reſpite. (c) Theſe Evil Spirits or Demons (ſays an Ancient Writer, contemporary with our Venerable Bede) are to be conſidered as Beings of the ſame Nature (τῆς ἀυτῆς φύσεως) with good Angels, but (a) Tertull. Lib. 1, de Reſur. Cap. 22.

(a) Chryſoſt. Hom. 4. in Geneſin.

the

(b) Quod corporis humana vitia ſentimus & patimur, non eſt pœna, MILITIA eſt.

(c) ὁ πόλεμος ἀναπαυλὴν οὐδὲ πόλε ἔχων, Chryſoſt. Orat. 3. in Geneſin.

became became evil (through their Pride) by their own Choice. (a)

Good and Bad Angels muſt be Subſtances, however we are at a Loſs to reconcile that with the preſent Notions we have of Space and local Motion. The ſacred Page has aſſured us, That the Good do ſtand before the Throne of God; and that 'tis one Part of their Buſineſs to conduct the Souls of the Bleſſed into Heaven, as well as to miniſter here below. They are both of them Spiritual Beings; and yet St. Paul (who was once caught up into the third Heaven) has aſſured us, that Spiritual Beings have ſome Sort of Bodies or Vehicles, which we are not to be made acquainted with on this Side of the Grave. There is a Natural Body, ſays the Apoſtle, i. e. ſuch a Tabernacle of Clay, as we all dwell in: But then, ſays he, There is alſo a Spiritual Body (σῶμα πνευματικὸν, 1 Cor. xv. 44.) Let our preſent Scepticks ſhew the Difference, if they can, rather than queſtion the Authority of the Holy Scriptures, by which we hope to be ſaved. That the good Angels have often appeared, is an undoubted Truth, evident from the Writings both of the Old and New Teſtament. And what can we underſtand by ſuch Appearances, but that they aſſumed ſome airy Vehicle, ſuch as the Almighty is pleaſed they ſhould ſometimes be cloathed with, in a more

(a) ἐκουσίως ἐκ τῆς ἀγαθῆς πρὸς τὸ κακὸν ἐκκλίναντες, J. Damaſc. de Orthodoxa Fide, Lib. 2. Cap. 4.

viſible

viſible Form, the better to execute their Divine Commiſſion among the Sons of Men. The evil Spirits, ſince, as I have obſerved, they be of the ſame Nature with the good, we are to conclude, have Vehicles of ſome Kind or other, that are inſtrumental in their Suggeſtions, Deluſions, and Operations upon our more groſs Vehicles or Bodies. We read of great Numbers exerciſing their Tyranny over one poor Man; and I could be glad to be informed, Gentlemen, whether it be our Piety, or what other Cauſe you pleaſe to aſſign, that ſcreens us from the Operations of the evil Part of the Intellectual World, at this Time of Day. Jeſus aſked him, i. e. The Chief of that helliſh Troop, What is thy Name? And he anſwered, ſaying, My Name is Legion; for we are many. (Mark v. 9.) The Subſtance therefore of theſe evil Spirits (after all the inconſiſtent Talk of our preſent wiſe Philoſophers about the Nature of Space, Extenſion, Immenſity, &c. when apply'd to the Inviſible World) muſt be of another Nature from thoſe Subſtances (how refin'd ſoever) which we are made acquainted with in this imperfect State. Clemens Alexandrinus, (at the Beginning of the third Century) who was a compleat Maſter of all Sorts of Learning; and if his Authority may weigh with you, Gentlemen) ſays, That though theſe evil Spirits are to be termed Incorporeal, as having nothing of that earthly Subſtance whereof we conſiſt ourſelves, and which therefore is called corporeal; yet, that ſtill they have ſomething analogous to our Bodies; and which I have already ſtiled airy Vehicles, or, in the Language of the Apoſtle, Spiritual Bodies. Clemens's Words, or, rather, as they are adopted from Theodotus, run thus; "Demons or evil "Spirits are called Incorporeal; not, as though "they had no Body: For they have ſome Form, "or Figure, or Likeneſs; (ἔχει γὰρ καὶ σχῆμα) by "which they have a Senſation of their Tor-"ments; but chiefly, becauſe, when compared "with thoſe Spiritual Bodies (τῶν σωζομένων "σωμάτων πνευματικῶν) that are ſaved, they are "but a Shadow, and therefore called Incorpo-"real." Syneſius, who was a Biſhop before Popery had a Being, (A. D. 410.) ſays, "'Tis "agreeable with Infinite Wiſdom, that the wic-"ked Powers in the World ſhould be made Uſe "of, as proper Inſtruments to fulfil his Will "and Pleaſure, when he ſees fit. (a) Accord-"ingly, when He is minded to puniſh, He "ſometime gives Commiſſion to thoſe evil Spirits, "that command whole Swarms of Locuſts; at "other Times to thoſe, whoſe Office it ſhall "be to cauſe and promote the Plague or Peſti-"lence; at other Times to thoſe, who ſhall be "the Inſtruments of ſubjecting a People to a "barbarous Nation; or a wicked Prince; or, "in ſhort, makes Nature in general ſubſervi-"ent to all his Purpoſes. —— Shall there be EVIL in a City, and the Lord hath not done it? (Amos iii. 6.)

(a) κακοποιας δυ ἀμεις ἐν κόσμῳ. Epiſt. 57. paſſim alias.

I heartily

I heartily wiſh, Gentlemen, that this Sort of Reaſoning upon the Matter, might obtain Credit with you; and that what I have ſaid, might be eſteem'd (what Biſhop Hutchinſon calls) a ſober Belief of Good and Bad Spirits; and which is an Eſſential Part, (he ſays), of every good Chriſtian's Faith. Sir Thomas Brown, that eminent Phyſician of Norwich; who, you will readily grant, was a Gentleman of an uncommon Size, in the Knowledge both of Nature and Art; (I preſume, the Biſhop will not put himſelf upon a Level with him, in that Reſpect) and, as he was very adroit in detecting Errors; the more ſo, to be ſure, he would have been, where Life was concern'd, if Witchcraft had been one; happening to attend at the Aſſizes held at Bury St. Edmond's, March 10, 1664: When the well known Tryal came on, for Witchcraft, before Sir Matthew Hale, then Lord Chief Baron: (After Evidence given) there was a mighty Deference paid to his Judgment, both by Judge and Jury, in being deſir'd to give his Opinion in open Court: And upon view of the Three Perſons, he gave his Opinion in the Words following, (a) viz. " That he was clearly of Opinion, that the " Perſons were Bewitched; ſaid, that in Den- " mark there had been lately a great Diſcovery " of Witches; who uſed the very ſame Way

(a) See Sir Matthew Hale's Treatiſe, touching Sheriffs Accompts, &c. Printed for D. Brown, 1716.

" of afflicting Perſons, by conveying Pins in-
" to them, and crooked as theſe Pins were,
" with Needles, and Nails. And his Opinion
" was, That the Devil, in ſuch Caſes, did " work on the Bodies of Men and Women;
" upon a natural Foundation, that is, to ſtir
" up, and excite ſuch Humours, ſuper-abound" ing in their Bodies, to a great Exceſs; where" by that Infernal Spirit (or his Agents) did " in an Extraordinary Manner afflict them with " ſuch Diſtempers (a) as their Bodies were " moſt Subject to; as particularly appeared in " theſe Children: For he conceived, That " theſe ſwooning Fits were Natural, and no" thing elſe but what they call the Mother;
" but then heightened to a great Exceſs, by
" the Subtilty of the Devil, (or his Agents)
" co-operating with the Malice of theſe, which " we term Witches; at whoſe Inſtance, he, (or " his Agents) do theſe Villanies." We ſee here, Gentlemen, in a few Words, not only the Phyſician, but the Philoſopher, and the Divine, in my Opinion, happily conjoin'd: I wiſh, you might think ſo too. Pleaſe to compare his Philoſophy, with what the Biſhop has given us in his firſt Chapter; where he endeavours to account for very many Caſes of Witchcraft, by the Help of Nature, and Art only; and is of Opinion, that we need not, in any Caſes of Witchcraft, have Recourſe to the Agency of (a) See Page 14, in the following Letter.

Spirits,

Spirits. I'll forbear being tedious; and, before I take my Leave of you, will ſay ſomething of the Divinity Part, which the Biſhop has given us in his twelfth Chapter. The Philoſophical Account from Nature join'd with Art, it muſt be ſaid, often makes one Merry: I could wiſh the Scotch Advocate had likewiſe been made Wiſer by the Clergyman's doing the beſt he could for the poor Woman (lying in Jail, under Suſpicion of Witchcraft) without the Aſſiſtance of any Divinity at all. There is a great deal of the Epilepſy, Poſture-maſter, Slight of Hand, &c. in which, we may venture to ſay, Judge and Jury would not be deceiv'd at this Time of Day, ſhould you not ſucceed in your Repeal. The Queſtion is gravely put, Why ſome Perſons fall into an Agony, if there be a Cat in the Room, though they do not ſee her? The Scotch Advocate anſwers, but is not ſuffer'd to diſtinguiſh, or to make any other Sort of Philoſophical Reply, than that ſome Scent, or ſecret Communication of Spirits, is the common Ground of all ſuch Antipathies; and conſequently, is the Reaſon why the Cat in the Room, has ſometimes that Effect of People's falling into an Agony. To urge the poor Woman's Caſe farther, in her Behalf, he reminds the Scotch Advocate, that a Woman may, many Ways, grow naſty, have ſome rank unſavoury Smell, that may grow to an Antipathy to others, &c. or there may be natural Fits, and Vapours, which, his Lordſhip aſſures us, if they continue, will alter the Habit of the Body, in ſo ſurpri-

zing

zing a Manner, that they will ſometimes even think themſelves Dead; at other Times repeat Prayers or Chapters, or ſpeak their Fancies in Verſe: Nay, (what Sir Thomas Brown, the Phyſician, you are to ſuppoſe, knew nothing of, or at leaſt to as little Purpoſe, as Lady Oſborn in her Weekly Packet, not knowing how to make a right Application) in a deep Fit of Melancholly, he puts his Scotch Advocate, and Juryman in Mind, that ſuch diſorder'd Perſons ſhall think (not that they are Dead, as before) but think themſelves Glaſs, or a rotten Stick, or Kings and Queens, or even God himſelf; which laſt, perhaps, you'll allow, borders a little too much upon Witchcraft, as it ſmells too ſtrong of a proud Luciferian Impulſe). 'Tis hence, ſays the Reverend Prelate, that we come to have ſo many Apparitions, and Spectres, and Sights of Perſons, who are at home, (a) at that Time about their lawful Occaſions.

The Right Reverend Author aſſures us, That he has been credibly informed, that the Organs of our Speech ſhall be ſo altered by Vapours, that a Man, ſitting in his Study (as we'll ſuppoſe) and often hearing Hogs grunting under his Window, began at laſt to grunt like them himſelf; and that another would crow like ſome Cock-Chickens: Nay, 'tis well known, ſays his Lord-

(a) His Lordſhip, I preſume, never read St. Auſtin, whom you'll find quoted in the following Letter, more than once, to this very Purpoſe.

ſhip,

ſhip, that, upon the Bite of a mad Dog, the Perſon ſhall bark, and think himſelf a Dog, and lap inſtead of Drinking. He deſires, it may be farther obſerved, how ſtrong they are in ſuch a diſordered Condition; that, when the fixed Spirits are kindled into a rapid Motion, Three Men ſhall hardly hold any one of them; and if they happen to give a Skip, they ſhall throw themſelves to a great Height or Length. He would have it obſerved farther, when they have convulſive Motions eſpecially, that they ſhall draw their Mouths all on one Side, and (like an arrant Poſture-Maſter) ſhall wring their Arms out of Joint, turn their Eyes inward, and make themſelves lamentable Spectacles. His Lordſhip ventures to affirm, in a more particular Manner, (which probably Sir Thomas Brown would have put among his Vulgar Errors) that if Blood be extravaſated ſlowly, the Heat of the Stomach, in a little Time, may form it into odd Figures; which, when they are vomited up, ſhall ſeem very Surprizing: Or, if the Stomach has received any Seed or Spawn, (ſuppoſe after eating a Lobſter, or Supping upon Caviere and a Toaſt) the Heat and Nourithment may produce the Animal. As to Pins, Needles, and Nails, his Lordſhip would have all Surgeons, as well as others, take it from him as an undoubted Truth, That, though they have been ſwallowed long before, they have been known to work their Way to the outward Parts of the Body, and to have been taken out of the Perſons Thighs or Sides: (And therefore not improbable, probable, in a Caſe of pretended Witchcraft, that Pins or Needles, &c. ſhould work out of the Stomach, and thence be taken out at the Mouth) His Lordſhip's Juryman, who came to adviſe with the Parſon of his Pariſh, (who otherwiſe are taken for Conjurers themſelves, though here it proved a Miſtake) and who thought, at firſt, that he was ſummoned upon a very Difficult Point, (as he acknowledges himſelf) begins to take Courage upon ſuch Advice as this, and chimes in with his Miniſter, by Way of Improvement upon ſuch philoſophical Topicks. —— Why truly, ſays the Honeſt Juryman, Phyſicians meeting with theſe Things in their Practice, it may be the Reaſon why they ſay, that ſuch Perſons give leaſt Ear to Stories of Witches. However, he tells his Miniſter, all thoſe undoubted Facts (as the Juryman calls them) that are told in Hiſtory, are not to be ſet aſide without further Satisfaction than he had yet given him —— What's to be done then, Gentlemen? The Clergyman proceeds; we have a great many other Matters to conſider of; (no doubt as weighty as the former) Too many go ſuch Lengths in their Diſtempers, as to manage them in a very wicked Manner, and to counterfeit Symptoms that their Diſeaſes did not occaſion. Though the Clergyman's Charity begins now to be called in Queſtion by the Juryman, yet the Matter is made fully to appear thus —— In the firſt Place Mahomet did it: And then, the Maid of Kent, and, in all Probability, the Surrey Impoſtor (not the Rabbit-Woman of

Godalmine

Godalmine of famous Memory). There was a Work of Nature, an odd Diſtemper for the Foundation, (ſo far, Gentlemen, the Biſhop and Sir Thomas Brown agree, you obſerve) and upon that they grafted ſuch Practices, as deceived great Multitudes; managing their Calamity to ſerve their own Intereſt, or Party, or Paſſion, or Humour: And when ſome cunning Fellow, who has a Body fit for it, falls into this wicked Way, it is hardly to be believed, how they can diſtort their own Bodies. (And is not this enough to make them paſs for Wizards, eſpecially if, at Night, the Candles ſhould have burnt dim or blue, when ſuch a cunning Fellow is playing his Tricks?) I have read many Inſtances of ſuch Raſcals in ſober Authors, &c. It is common with ſome of them, by long holding of their Breath, to throw themſelves into real Fits, when they will: By often moving and ſtretching (doucement mon cher Eveque) the Skin of their Heads, if the Hair be ſhort, they can make it ſtand upright like an angry Dog; and then they will bark and ſnarl (like a Clinch of Barnet); nay, run upon all Four, (which you'll ſay is wonderful) as if they were changed into Maſtiffs: They can even ſwallow their Tongues, foam at the Mouth, and put their Arms, Legs, or Back-bones out of Joint. (Do you not take it for CONJURING, Gentlemen, or DEALING with ſome FAMILIAR SPIRIT, when you ſee an impudent Fellow, at this VERY JUNCTURE, in one of your Play-houſes (as I am inform'd) whilſt you are carrying on the grave Debates about WITCHCRAFT, enabling himſelf (ſome how or other) to Dart his Body, in that ſtupendous Manner, between the ſeveral Rounds of an ordinary LADDER; and, after placing his Head upon the TOP of it, coming down, without any viſible Aſſiſtance, in like Manner?) They can huff up their Bellies, ſuck up their Breath, and draw in their Gtus, till the By-ſtanders may feel the Back-bone. (Doucement, Encore. I profeſs, Gentlemen, I am perfectly Ignorant, whence our Right Reverend, got all this KNOWLEDGE, or where his SOBER AUTHORS are to be met with): Indeed he informs us of one, once of his own Pariſh, that he knew to be an honeſt Man, (and therefore could not deal with a FAMILIAR SPIRIT: But then, his Lordſhip ſays, This honeſt Man was able to thruſt a Pin, up to the Head, in a hollow Place of his Arm, without Bleeding; and he aſſures us (in which I can give Evidence myſelf) that others can change their Voices ſo, that they ſhall not be like their own: Nay, they can do it ſo cleverly, their Lips hardly moving, as if the Voice (ſays he) came from their own Fundament: (Witneſs the late Jeſuitical Blackſmith, ſome where about Leiceſter Fields). Cardinal Mazarin, (notwithſtanding all his POPERY) to ſtop the growing Evil, ſays his Lordſhip, of the Accuſations of Witches, in 1634, threaten'd ſome of thoſe reputed Witches with ſevere Puniſhments. (But this Offence, you are now taking Notice of, will, to the great Joy of many of the old Women, be made none at all; and, if we are rightly informed form'd without Doors, the whole Affair of Witchcraft is be to diſcarded, as a Relict of Popery, without any Diſtinction made, as to the ſober Belief of good and bad Spirits; which is acknowledg'd by our Author, to be an Eſſential Part of every good Chriſtian's Faith). And when this Affair of Witchcraft, was laid before the Univerſity of Montpelier; (an Affair purely of a Religious Nature, abſtracted from the Civil Puniſhment; and, if I might aſk; what, if the Concurrence of an Engliſh Convocation had been had, in making ſuch a General Repeal?) one Queſtion propos'd, was this, ſays the Biſhop, " Whether Barking or Crying like " a Dog, that ſeem'd to come from the Fun- " dament, rather than the Throat, was a ſure " Sign of a Demoniack." And the Anſwer which the Univerſity gives, is (and I hope it will be conſider'd of in a favourable Manner, ſince they were profeſs'd Papiſts, in the Preamble of your Bill); " That human Induſtry, " can go ſo far in Imitation, that it is ſeen " every Day, that Perſons Learn to Imitate, " in great Perfection, the Way, the Cry, the " Note, of all Kind of Creatures; and do it " ſo, as one ſhall perceive no Motion in their " Lips.

It would be inexcuſable to trouble you any longer, Gentlemen, with this Way and Manner of decrying Witchcraft; and I'll venture to Propheſy, ſuch Sort of Arguing will not be made uſe of in your own Learned Debates upon the ſame Subject. I therefore chuſe to proceed, in conſidering his Lordſhip's Scripture Account of Witchcraft; whence you may juſtly expect to find more Satisfaction in the Affair you are about. Now, in his 12th Chapter, he gives you this Account (you know) of the Divine Laws, relating to Witchcraft, i. e. to any Sort of Communications with, or Operations upon the Intellectual, and Corporeal World; (for ſo, I ſuppoſe, the Queſtion will be conſider'd in your two Houſes, if any Debates ſhould happen to ariſe about it.) His Lordſhip ſets out, in declaring, That 'tis a Point of very great Difficulty, (and therefore, I am in Hopes, an abſolute Repeal of the Statute will not paſs without ſome Difficulty likewiſe): "Nor will he pretend to make himſelf Um-"pire: But this he pretends to do, viz. To "offer ſome few Things, that he thinks are "manifeſt, and may keep us from preſſing too "hard againſt our Neighbour's Lifes." I ſhall beg Leave Humbly to offer ſomething likewiſe to your diſcerning Judgments, as to the ſame Affair; and, if afterwards any Thing may be thought wanting, to give you full Satisfaction, I will not quit this Chapter of the Biſhop's, till, in my own private Judgment at leaſt, I have given it you: And I think it the more Reaſonable for me to do this, as well on Account of the Witch of Endor's being ſuffer'd by the Almighty to have ſuch a Communication with the Intellectual World; as alſo on Account of thoſe other Appearances, and Communications, that are treated of in the following Letter;

Letter; many of which happen'd ſome Ages after Chriſtianity was eſtabliſh'd, and want no Authority to ſupport the Truth of them, without having Recourſe to Mr. Glanvil, or any Modern Authors. Grotius, in his Note upon Exodus xxii. 18. Thou ſhalt not ſuffer a Witch to Live, obſerves, That the ſame Word is uſed by the Lxx. Greek Interpreters, in their Interpretation of the Hebrew, that St. Paul uſes, (Gal. v. 20.) where he forbids Witchcraft. Our Learned H. Ainſworth, obſerves farther, that the Greek Word uſed by the Lxx ſtands alſo in the Plural Number, (φαρμακὰς) implying, that though Witchcraft is moſt in Uſe among that Sex, yet, that the Man-Witch, or Sorcerer, is included. And the Hebrews, ſays he, Remark thus: (a) "Whoſoever is guilty of Death, "the Judges, that do not put him to Death, "they break an Affirmative Precept, but Tranſ-"greſs not againſt a Prohibitive, ſaving of the "Witch: For, if they put not him to Death, "they Tranſgreſs a Prohibition." The ſame Learned Annotator ſays, in another Place (Ex. vii. 11.) That Sorcerers or Witches, are ſuch Perſons as Bewitch the Senſes and Minds of Men; by changing the Forms of Things to another Hue. From the Hebrew, Caſhaph, (which ſignifies changing or turning) the Greeks have form'd their Βασκαίνω, and the Latines, Faſcino, which is to Bewitch; and is uſed for

(a) Maimon in Sanhedrin, Cap. 14. Sect. 3.

unlawful unlawful deviliſh Arts and Artizans, ſuch as God's (Judicial) Law condemneth, and puniſheth with Death. St. Paul (2. Tim. iii. 8.) ſets down the Names of the Chiefs in Sorceries, as they were kept in the Jews private Records: And from Pliny we learn, (a) that the Memory of theſe Sorcerers continued among the Heathens, though their Names were corrupted. Origen againſt Celſus, (b) ſhews how Numenius, a Pythagorian Philoſopher, ſpeaketh of Moſes's Miracles in Egypt, and his Reſiſtance by Joannes, and Mambres, Magicians. Apuleius alſo, a Latin Philoſopher, (c) mentions one Joannes, among the chief Magicians. If Epiphanius (as quoted by a truly Excellent, Learned, and Judicious Engliſh Biſhop, (d) may be heeded by you, Gentlemen, in this Affair: He tells us, from one that was an Eye-witneſs, of a Magical Operation, uſed by a Jew, to procure the Love of a Chriſtian Woman; and that ſhe was preſerved from the δυναμις φαρμακειας, (the ſame Word that St. Paul uſes, (Gal. v. 20.) from the Power of his Witchcraft, by the Seal of Chriſt, (as he calls the Sign of the Croſs) wherewith ſhe fortify'd herſelf, at the firſt Attempt made upon her. (e) Such wicked Wretches, ſays Biſhop Patrick, did a World of other Miſ-

(a) Nat. Hiſt. L. 30. C. 1.
(b) Lib. 4.
(c) Apol. 2.
(d) Biſhop Patrick, on Exod. xxii. 18.
(e) Eph. Her. 30. 7. 8.

chief

chief, and therefore were to be put to Death, whether they were Men or Women. One of the Hebrew Doctors, as quoted by the Biſhop, gives this Reaſon why Witches were not to live, viz. " Becauſe they directly thwarted God moſt " Bleſſed, who made all Things, when he cre- " ated them, for ſuch and ſuch Purpoſes; which " they perverted, and by Devices of their own, " made to ſerve other Ends, which God never " deſigned. " But this they could not do, ſays the good Biſhop, without the Help of evil Spirits; and therefore their Crime conſiſted in entering into a Familiarity, ſays he, and a League with them, whoſe Aſſiſtance, upon ſuch Occaſion they invoked; which was in Effect, a renouncing of God. This was an Impiety, goes on the venerable Prelate, which had overſpread the whole World, eſpecially the Eaſtern Parts of it. And, as for the Romans, we find a Law, as old as the Twelve Tables, againſt Witchcraft; and the like Law obtained amongſt the Athenians: For the Greeks were extremely addicted to it; eſpecially in Theſſaly. I need not inform you, Gentlemen, (and I am ready to ſuppoſe it) what the Sin is, in the very next Verſe to this, that I have choſen to ſet in its full Light; and which in its Puniſhment is ſtill juſtly Capital in the Eye of our Law. The Statutes are both taken from the Judicial Code of the Hebrews, which we often make our Example, in framing our Laws. The latter Sin is ſo infamous, and ſuch a Diſhonour to Nature, and the Author of Nature (as the Biſhop, from

Corn.

Conr. Pellicanus, gloſſes upon it) " That it was " not fit ſuch a Perſon ſhould live upon the " Face of the Earth, but die without Mer- " cy. (a) Pray tell us, Gentlemen, in your Preamble, why the Puniſhment ſhould not be proportionable to the Offence, if it be a real one, as I am willing to think, you take it to be; and which my Lord Chief Juſtice Hale, and other great Lawyers, do all acknowledge to be an Offence immediately againſt the Divine Majeſty? Be pleaſed to conſider, if your Zeal has not carried you too far, whether there has not been (and how ſoon it may be again, the wiſeſt cannot tell) as unqueſtionable Evidence for Familiarity held by human Kind with Spirits, tho' inviſible, as there has been for that between Man and Beaſt? Whether it be reaſonable (even as to the Puniſhment) to repeal the one Statute rather than the other? And whether what you are ſo doing, be not in Contradiction to the Legiſlature of the wiſeſt Kingdoms on Earth? My Lord Chief Juſtice Hale certainly thought ſo, when he directed the Jury, after the Tryal of Witches, already taken Notice of, " That there " were ſuch Creatures as Witches, he ſaid, he " made no Doubt at all, and that for theſe two " Reaſons; For firſt, the Holy Scriptures have " affirmed ſo much. 2*dly*, The Wiſdom of all " Nations (whatever the more-knowing Biſhop

(a) Exod. xxii. 19.

" has

" has alledged to the contrary) had provi" ded Laws againſt ſuch Perſons, which is an " Argument of their Confidence of ſuch a " Crime: And ſuch has been the Judgment " of this Kingdom; as appears (ſince the " Times of Popery) by that Act of Par" liament, which hath proved Puniſhments
" (ſays that great Man) proportionable to the " Quality of the Offence." And no Judge ever better enforced the Obſervance of a Law, than he did, in thoſe unexceptionable Words —
" For to condemn the Innocent, and to let the " Guilty go free, are both an Abomination to
" the Lord."

If I might not grow troubleſome, Gentlemen, I would now proceed in juſtifying Samuel's Appearance at Endor; which, perhaps, you may not judge fully enough ſpoken to in the following Letter; and I chuſe rather to do this, both becauſe it will beſt ſerve to remove ſome Objections, that may poſſibly remain with you, taken from Biſhop Hutchinſon's 12th Chapter; as alſo to repel the low Wit and Raillery, ſuch as Mr. Webſter the Phyſician, and others have diſplay'd in their Diſcourſes upon Witchcraft in general.

I have not, in the following Letter, taken Notice of Biſhop Patrick's Opinion of Samuel's Apperance; which I ſhall now do — and, tho' I have thought proper to differ from that Great Man in ſome Things relating to it, (which I muſt now, Gentlemen, humbly ſubmit to your penetrating and Impartial Judgment) yet we ſhall be both found, in the main Point, ſufficient, I hope,

hope, to enervate Biſhop Hutchinſon's Scriptural Notions of Witchcraft. (a) Biſhop Patrick then, ſays upon the Matter thus; " Interpreters are " very much divided, (b) ſome imagining, it " was Samuel himſelf that appeared; others, a " Spectre, which, by the Power of the Devil, " appeared in his Likeneſs. Several of the " Ancient Fathers are of the former Opinion, " and particularly Juſtin Martyr; who, in his " Dialogue with Trypho the Jew, alledges this " as a Demonſtration of the Immortality of the " Soul; and moſt of the Roman Church are " now of the ſame Mind: But Tertullian ſays, " (c) God forbid, we ſhould believe the Soul of " any Holy Man, much leſs of a Prophet, ſhould " be brought up by the Power of the Devil. " Of this Perſuaſion are a great Number of the " Ancients, particularly St. Cyril of Alexan- " dria; who thinks it the greateſt Abſurdity " to believe, that a wretched Woman ſhould " call up Samuel's Soul; the Demons, with " whom ſuch People deal, having no ſuch Pow- " er. And ſo St. Jerom calls this Samuelis " Phantaſma. Yet there are vaſt Numbers of " modern Authors, who think, that, by God's " Permiſſion or Diſpenſation, the Soul of Sa- " muel might appear; " (cloathed in ſome proper Vehicle) which Sir John Marſham himſelf

---

(a) See the following Letter from p. 24 to 42, &c.

(b) See his Comment on 1 Sam. xxviii. 12.

(c) Lib. de Anima, Cap. 57.

takes

takes not to be improbable. (a) But the very Letter of the Text ſeems to me to be againſt this Opinion, which ſpeaks of bringing him up, and his coming up out of the Earth; whereas, if it had been Samuel, he ſhou'd rather have come down from Heaven. This Apparition therefore (as I take it) was one of thoſe fallacious Spirits, whom Porphyry ſpeaks of, (b) "who "put on any Shape, and counterfeit the Gods "and Demons and the Souls of the Dead." Which a very learned Perſon (c) hath confirmed by this Reaſon, which to me ſeems very ſolid, viz. that ſince God was not pleaſed to anſwer Saul (as he confeſſed) either by Prophets, or by Dreams, or by Urim and Thummim, but had withdrawn himſelf wholly from him; it is not probable, that he would ſend Samuel himſelf to him from the Dead, (and none elſe could do it) and that at the Call of a Witch; when he wou'd not favour him with any Revelation from a Living Prophet, or any other Way.

The learned Dr. H. More, contemporary with Biſhop Patrick, appears, from ſome Letters of his, preſerv'd amongſt the Papers of one of his Ingenious Correſpondents deceas'd, and from thence lately publiſh'd, to have had to do with ſuch Adverſaries of Witchcraft, who by their Writings had openly diſavow'd their Belief of (a) See his Chron. Canon XIII.

(b) Lib. 2. de Abſtin.
(c) John Wagenſeil, Confut. Carm. Lipmani.

 Spirits,

Spirits, (a) and had, moreover, to ſupport their Notions, ventured to Appeal to the Holy Scriptures themſelves; and that with plauſible Arguments and ſeeming Abilities, in their Criticiſms and Interpretations of them; the better to ſeduce the unwary, and to gain the greateſt Number of Proſelytes. Now, what ſays the learned Dr. (Gentlemen) to theſe Things? He does (in a Poſtſcript) firſt of all obſerve, as to the Words Witch and Wizard, that, in the primary or natural Notation of them, they ſignify no more than a Wiſe Man or a Wiſe Woman; (b) which occaſions Biſhop Hutchinſon, in his Scriptural Account of Witchcraft (c) "to make this ſhrewd "Obſervation, viz. One may be pretty ſure, "that the Law (Exod. xxii. 18.) was not, Thou "ſhalt not ſuffer a Wiſe Woman to live." And the good Biſhop, inſtead of comparing and conſidering the various Texts, as they ſtand in the Original, (where the Words, relating to Witch, Wizard, Sorcerer, &c. occur, and plainly ſhew us, that both the Literal and Metaphorical Import of the Words are to be regarded by us) is pleaſed to amuſe his Reader with various Tranſlations; which I don't ſee, can poſſibly do his Cauſe any real Service, but rather the contrary. And I can, moreover, affirm, from Tindal's

---

(a) Mr. Webſter in particular, in his Diſplay of Witchcraft.

(b) Ælfricus in his Saxon Grammar, reads it Wicca Ariolus: inde Wiſlian, ſays he, incantare, vid. Skinner, in voce.

(c) Cap. 12. p. 183.

Tran-

Tranſlation revis'd by Mathews 1551, now lying before me, (if they may be allow'd to know any Thing of the Hebrew Text) that the Words are " Thou ſhalte not ſuffre a Witch to live. " But the Biſhop does not ſee, he ſays, if we " take the Original Words, or the Tranſlations " which Way we will, that we can venture to " lay much Weight upon them. " How then? A Witch, ſays he, (literally underſtood) is no more than a knowing Woman — Weet (in the Saxon) to Know, anſwering exactly to the Latin Word Saga, according to that of Feſtus, SAGÆ dictæ Anus quæ multa ſciunt. But Uſe, queſtionleſs, appropriated the Word to ſuch a Kind of Skill and Knowledge, as was out of the common Road, or extraordinary. Nor did this Peculiarity imply in it any unlawfulneſs. But there was after, a further Reſtriction, and moſt proper of all, and in which alone, now a Days the Words Witch and Wizard are uſed; and that is, for one that has the Knowledge or Skill of doing or telling Things in an extraordinary or præternatural Way; and that in Vertue of either an expreſs or implicit Sociation or Confederacy with ſome Evil Spirit. This is a true and adequate Definition of a Witch or Wizard.

The Words of Scripture generally deſcanted upon, in Oppoſition to the eſtabliſhed Notion of Witchcraft, are, Deut. xviii. 10, 11. There ſhall not be found among you any one that uſeth Divination, or an Obſerver Times, or an Enchanter, or a Witch, or a Charmer, or a Conſulter with Familiar Spirits, or a Wizard, or a Necro-

Necromancer. Now when Saul ſays to the Witch of Endor, Divine unto me, I pray thee, by the Familiar Spirit, or by the Python, &c. (1 Sam. xxviii. 8.) (a) the ſame Word is uſed for Divining in both Places; the comparing of which Places only, ſhew the Word Divination muſt be underſtood, as implying one Sort of Witchcraft, or an Operation ſurpaſſing natural Knowledge or human Sagacity. Your Patience, Gentlemen, I fear, will not allow me to dilate and apply, as Dr. H. More does, upon this Subject; and therefore ſhall ſtudy Brevity; though I don't think it always good, as the Poet ſays it is; eſpecially, where Divine Truths are to be cleared up in the ſtrongeſt Manner. Some, who have inſulted over the ſuppoſed Ignorance of our Engliſh Tranſlators, when they render the Original (Menacheſh) Enchanter, only ſhew, that they wanted that Learning and Judgment, which the others had. Charming and Enchanting are acknowledged by them to be all one in the Original Import of the Words; and therefore here the Word (Menacheſh) may properly denote ſuch Perſons as kill Serpents by their charming, from the Word (Nachaſh) which ſignifies a Serpent; from whence comes (Nicheſh) to kill Serpents, or make away with them. For a Verb in Pihel, obſerves Dr. More, has ſometimes (eſpecially when it is formed from a Noun) a contrary Signification. For Inſtance, the ſame Word uſed

---

(a) קסומי־נא לי באוב.

for

for he ſinned, ſhall alſo ſometimes ſignify, he made Satisfaction for Sin; and ſo here from the Word (Nachaſh) a Serpent, is made or rendered He delivered from Serpents, i. e. either by killing or driving away by Enchantment. And therefore there ſeems to have been a great deal of Skill and Depth of Judgment in our Engliſh Tranſlators, in this Reſpect; eſpecially when that of Augur or Soothſayer, which the Lxx call οἰωνιζόμενον (there being ſo many harmleſs Kinds of it) might ſeem leſs ſuitable with this black Liſt. Our old Engliſh Tranſlators read the latter Part of the 11th Verſe thus, That counceleth with Spirites, or a Propheciar, or that asketh the Advyce of the Dead. All that do ſuch Things are an Abhomynacyon unto the Lorde. Now, to rid Serpents by a Charm, is above the Power of Nature; and therefore an Indication of one that has the Aſſiſtance of ſome Inviſible Spirit, to help him in this, as well as other Inſtances of Witchcraft.

As to the Word (Mecaſſeph) which our Old Engliſh Tranſlations (as I have taken Notice already) render Witchcraft or Witch; 'Tis to be obſerv'd, the Words in (Deut. xviii. 10 11.) do all contain but ſeveral Denominations of a Witch; who may have ſeveral more Properties than one Name intimates: Whence it is no Wonder, that Tranſlators do not render them always alike. But, (as in our Common

(a) מכשף.

Law)

Law) ſo many Names for this End are reckon'd up here in this Clauſe of the Law of Moſes, that the Sence may be more ſure, and leave no Room for Evaſion. And, indeed, had our Statute of 1 Jac. (now going to be Repeal'd) no Manner of Foundation from that Judicial Law to ſupport it; I muſt entirely agree with you, Gentlemen, that the Continuance of it would be juſtly interpreted a Law of extreme Severity, or, rather, Cruelty; to puniſh with Death a poor Hocus-Pocus Vagrant, that has, you know, a proper Puniſhment allotted him already by the Common Law; whilſt Endorian Witches are now to be left as free (if I am rightly inform'd) by this Repeal, in doing real Miſchief from the Intellectual World, as the Lancaſhire ones (according to the Engliſh Proverb) are ſaid to do it naturally in the Material.

Dr. More obſerves, in his Poſtſcript, that our witty Diſplayers of Witchcraft are very much miſtaken in their Writings about it, as often as they pretend to give us the Meaning of the Original Words (Shoel Obh) which our Engliſh Tranſlation, at this Day, renders a Conſulter with Familiar Spirits. (a) The Lxx. have render'd it a Ventriloquiſt, or one, whoſe Words ſeem to come from the Bottom of his Belly: (b) And therefore, according to their rendring of it, the Words in the Hebrew muſt neceſſarily ſignify him that has this Familiar Spirit; and (a) Deut. xviiii. 11. (b) ἐγγαστρίμυθον.

con-conſequently the Words (Shoel Obh) are to be underſtood of the Witch, or Wizard himſelf, that aſks Counſel of his Familiar; and does, by Vertue of him, give Anſwers to others. Dr. More thinks it probable, that the Reaſon of the Name of the Hebrew Word (Obh) might be taken firſt from that Spirit, which was in the Body of the Party, and ſwell'd it to a Protuberancy, like the Side of a Bottle: But afterwards, ſays he, without any Relation to that Circumſtance, the Word (Obh) came to ſignify as much as Pytho, (as the Word Pytho itſelf, though at firſt it took its Name from Pythii Vates, came afterwards to ſignify no more than a Spirit of Divination in general, a Spirit that tells hidden Things, or Things to come. The Words Obh and Pytho do alſo agree in this; that they both ſignify, either the Divinatory Spirit itſelf, or the Party that has that Spirit. But here, in the Words, (Shoel Obh) they being render'd by the Lxx. a Ventriloquiſt, (a) Obh is neceſſarily underſtood of the Spirit itſelf, as Pytho in the xvith of the Acts, ver. 16. if we read as Iſ. Caſaubon does, (πνεῦμα πύθωνα). But if, πύθων, it may be underſtood either Way. It is ſaid, " St. Paul being " grieved, turned, and ſaid to that Spirit, I " Command thee, in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt, " to come out of her, (b) and became out at " the ſame Hour;" which ſignifies as plainly as any Thing can be ſignify'd, that this Pytho, or Spirit of Divination, or this Obh, was in her: For, as the Spaniſh Proverb has it, Nothing can come out of the Sack, that was not in the Sack: Nor could this Pytho come out of her, unleſs it was a Spirit diſtinct from her. But, what Prophaneneſs, mix'd with the moſt conſummate Impudence, do ſome of the Free-Thinkers of this laſt Age diſcover, when they talk of this Paſſage in the Sacred Writings; not ſcrupling to make this Pytho, in the Maid there mention'd, nothing but a wicked Humour of Cheating, and Couzening Divination; and adding, that this Spirit was no more caſt out of that Maid, than the Seven Devils out of Mary Magdalen; which they would have to be underſtood, only of her ſeveral Vices? This ſurely can be call'd nothing leſs than Blaſpheming againſt the Spirit of Chriſt in St. Paul, and St. Luke.

(a) ἐγγαστρίμυθον. (b) ἐξελθεῖν ἀπ' αὐτῆς.

'Tis plain, in the Caſe of the Witch of Endor, that the Original Word (Obh) ſignifies, both the Spirit itſelf that divines, and him or her alſo that has it. I pray thee Divine unto me by the Familiar Spirit, ſays Saul; by the Pytho or באוב. 'Tis by the Lxx (as I have obſerved already) render'd, ἐν τῷ ἐγγαστριμύθῳ, i. e. by that Spirit that ſometimes goes into the Body of the Party, and thence gives Anſwers. Here, indeed, in the Moſaick Law (already ſpoken to, Deut. xviii.) it only ſignifies a Familiar Spirit. (a)

(a) We have no one Word adequate, in the Engliſh Language, to expreſs fully the Meaning of the Word אוב.

But,

But, ſay Saul's Servants, " Here is a Woman that hath ſuch a Spirit — there the Word (Obh) muſt needs ſignify both the Spirit itſelf, and the Woman of Endor that was the Owner or Poſſeſſor of it. I dare not entertain the leaſt Thought, Gentlemen, that you have any of the Free-thinking Qualities, that are ſo prevalent, at this Time of Day, in Relation to Subjects of this Nature; and muſt believe, that, in the Preamble of your Bill (which I have not ſeen) you have taken all poſſible Care to guard againſt the Suggeſtions of a cenſorious Age; by ſupporting the Chriſtian Doctrine, and declaring to the World, (as Biſhop Hutchinſon does to his Right Honourable Chiefs) That the ſober Belief of Good and Bad Spirits is an eſſential Part of every good Chriſtian's Faith. However, it muſt be ſaid, the contrary Temper is too obvious amongſt us without Doors; and this has induc'd me to trouble you in ſuch a Manner; though, I now hear, what I have to offer, comes too late, and there ſeems no other Reaſon poſſibly to be aſſign'd for it, but, that my unknown Printer ſides with the Majority, in procraſtinating the Birth of this little Pamphlet. Such has been the Prophaneneſs of ſome Writers againſt Witchcraft in the laſt Age (particularly as to the Sacred Paſſage now before us) that, inſtead of a Familiar Spirit, they would have the Hebrew (Bagnalath Obh) to have no other Meaning, than that Saul's Servants directed their Maſter to a Miſtreſs of the Bottle. (Such a Place, where the daily fatal Rendevouſes are, amongſt ourſelves, call'd the Gin-Shops.) Who, (ſays Dr. More) but the Maſter of the Bottle, or, rather, of whom the Bottle had become Maſter, and made his Wits exceſſive muddy as well as frothy, cou'd ever ſtumble upon ſuch a fooliſh Interpretation? Becauſe the Word, (Obh) forſooth, ſays the Dr. in one Place of the Scripture, ſignifies a Bottle, it muſt therefore ſignify ſo here; and it muſt be the Inſtrument too, out of which this cheating Queen of Endor (as the Writer ſharply expreſſes himſelf) did whiſper, peep, or chirp like a Chicken coming out of the Shell. (a) And did ſhe not, I beſeech you (ſays Dr. More) put her Nib alſo into it, (the Bottle) ſometimes; as tis ſaid of a certain Bird, when, by putting her Nib into a Reed, ſhe cries like a Butter-bump? certainly ſuch a witty-two-Edged-Sword Writer might as well have interpreted thoſe Words (Bagnalath Obh) of the great Tun of Heidelberg, (that Tom Coriat takes ſuch ſpecial Notice of) as of the Bottle.

I will detain you no longer, Gentlemen, even ſhou'd you have Patience to read thus far; it may, perhaps, lead you on to go farther, and to read what the Lady has been told likewiſe in the following Letter, writ ſome Years ago. A late noble Duke (and, I hope, his Illuſtrious Deſcendant, will now have ſome Regard to the Words) was thus addreſs'd by an ingenious Pen, in hopes of having a Chriſtian Prin- ciple better defended againſt the Sadducean one.

(a) Webſter's Diſplay, p. 129, 165.

ciple

" I know, my Lord, the Eſſay is ſeaſonable,
" and contains Things which relate to our big-
" geſt Intereſt; the Deſign being to ſecure ſome
" of the Outworks of Religion, and to regain
" a Parcel of Ground, which bold Infidelity
" hath invaded. And I cannot but obſerve
" ſadly, that, whilſt the Sects are venting their
" Animoſities againſt each other, and ſcribling
" for their Conceits, and the particular Advan- " tages of their Way; they don't perceive,
" that Atheiſm comes on by large Strides, and " enters the Breaches they have made; and
" which they are ſtill endeavouring to make
" wider, if they can. Sober and conſiderate
" Men ſee the formidable Danger, and have
" as ſtrenuouſly endeavoured, and ſtill en" deavour to maintain the Walls, while the Fac" tions within are known to be very buſy, and
" ſo divided, that they cannot attend the deſ-
" perate Hazard, and will not joyn in a com- " mon Defence. I have tried to make good one " of the Forts, upon which the Enemy has made " impetuous Aſſaults, and hope for Succeſs. I " am very little concerned for the ſmall Ped-
" laries, that ſome Mens Fondneſs calls Reli- " gion; by which that ſacred Thing has been
" expoſed to a great deal of Contempt and Diſho- " nour. But yet, my Lord, I think it my Du" ty to have a Zeal for thoſe great and certain " Matters, upon which our Hopes, as to the " other World, are grounded. The Evidence
" that is given us from the Attributes of God,

the

" the Phænomena of Providence, and the Nature
" of our Souls, ſhould be ſufficient to convince " any, but thoſe who will ſtupidly believe, that " they ſhall die like Beaſts, that they may " live like them. There are ſome Arguments
" that contain very plain Evidence concerning " Witches and Apparitions ; but then, as they " require an unbiaſſed Way of Thinking, and " ſome Degree of Attention, 'tis not to be " wonder d at, if they take no Hold upon the " whiſtling Spirits, that are not uſed to con-
" ſider.

" My Lord, if we make our compute like
" Men, and do not ſuffer ourſelves to be abuſed
" by the Flatteries of Senſe, and the deceitful
" Gaieties, that ſteal us away from God, and " from ourſelves: There is nothing can render " the Thoughts of this odd Life tolerable, but " the Expectation of another. And wiſe Men
" have ſaid, that they would not live a Mo- " ment, if they thought they were not to live
" again. This, perhaps, ſome may take to be " the diſcontented Paradox of a melancholick,
" vex'd, and of mean Condition, that is pinch'd
" by the Straitneſs of Fortune, and envies the " Heights of others Felicity and Grandeur :
" But, by that Time thoſe, that they judge ſo,
" have ſpent the Heats of frolick Youth ; and " have paſs'd over the ſeveral Stages of Vanity ;
" when they come to ſit down, and make ſober
" Reflections upon their Pleaſures and Purſuits, " and ſum up the Account of all that is with
" them, and before them ; I doubt not, but

" their

" their conſidering Thoughts will incline them " to make Solomon's Concluſion; and find, that " 'tis but a Miſery, if we were to live for " nothing elſe.

Whilſt we are paſſing thro' this Vale of Miſery, Gentlemen, may no evil Angels be ſent amongſt us to diſturb our Temporal Peace; may the Almighty rather give his good Angels Charge over us; to keep us in all our Ways; ſo ſhall no Evil happen unto us; neither ſhall any Plague come nigh our Dwelling: Our Fruit ſhall not be given to the Caterpiller, nor our Labour to the Graſshopper: The Enemy ſhall not be able to do us Violence; nor ſhall the Son of Wickedneſs hurt us. This ſhort Prayer (never, perhaps, more ſeaſonable than at preſent) is founded upon that undoubted Truth, which the Royal Pſalmiſt has laid down (Pſalm xxxiv. 7.) The Angel of the Lord tarrieth or encampeth round about them that fear him. I am,

GENTLEMEN,

Your Obedient Humble Servant.

Piſteuo-Daimon.

POST-

POSTSCRIPT.

GENTLEMEN,

IT would be highly obliging, and much for the Satisfaction, not only of your Electors, but of Thouſands beſides: If you would pleaſe (ſome Way or other) to communicate your Reaſons, for bringing in your Bill; by anſwering the following ſhort Queries;

I. Whether Puniſhments ſhould not be Proportionable to the Nature or Quality of the Offence?

II. Whether Witchcraft, and dealing with Familiar Spirits, was not, by the Judicial Law of Moſes, an Offence immediately againſt the Divine Majeſty?

III. Whether all wiſe Nations (as Lord Chief Juſtice Hale told the Jury) have not Proceeded hitherto upon the Foot of that Judicial Law, in providing proper Puniſhments of ſuch Offence?

IV. Whether our own Judges, at preſent, have not as great Abilities for diſcovering an Impoſtor, and well executing the Law in the late Statute of 1 Jac. C. 12. (ſhould there have been Occaſion for it) as any of thoſe

wiſe

wiſe Nations, in the Execution of their Laws?

V. Whether there be any Reaſon to be aſſign'd, why the Judicial Law againſt Witchcraft, &c. ſhould not ſtill be in Force, as well as that againſt Buggery, Exod. xxii. 19.?

VI. What Reaſon there can be, for more Tenderneſs now, in puniſhing an Offence with Death, where the Honour of the Almighty is manifeſtly concern'd, than there was, during the Jewiſh Diſpenſation, and hath been ſince?

GENTLEMEN,

I will not be troubleſome in putting any more Queries —— You may convey your Reaſons to us in any obſcure Manner, you ſhall condeſcend to do it in —— We ſhall not much mind the Canal or Conduit, by which they come to us; and it will be no ſmall Satisfaction to know them, ſhould they happen (as very likely they will) to croſs our own private Judgment. Only believe, that at preſent our Scruples are ſtrong upon us without Doors; however merry you may have made yourſelves about SPIRITS in St. Stephen's Chapel. We are afraid, that, by taking away the Puniſhment, you may have left the Doctrine to ſhift for itſelf in Peoples Minds; had we not (as Proteſtants) our Bibles to ſupport it. Beſides, we are under no ſmall Concern, leſt our Chriſtianity at Home may, even in this Reſpect, have a worſe Name given it,

it, than it has hitherto had, Abroad. We are not ignorant, how eaſy and faſhionable it is to act the Droll, in laughing at the Stories of Witches and Apparitions. The ſolemn Vanities of Superſtition, and the Tales of Old Women, are what moſt of us are no Strangers to, and have generally as great an Averſion to them: But, Gentlemen, there's a Time (you very well know) to be ſerious; and, after all ſuch affected Merriments in our Converſation; it ought to be remember'd, That our Reaſon ſhould not always be an obedient Servant to a wanton Fancy. I never yet could obſerve a Droll to be a cloſe Reaſoner; and they often deſerve our Pity more than an Anſwer, when they ſometimes attempt to make a Juſt Inference. Of all our Faculties, our Judgment ſeems to be of the ſloweſt Growth; which is the Reaſon, in many Things, when Age and Experience has ripened it, that we are ſaid to grow wiſer; eſpecially in Matters of real Moment: Whilſt, for Want of due Attention to Men and Things, there may ſometimes be found Grey Hairs diſcovering Boyiſh Imaginations. And when our Imaginations grow looſe, and know no Bounds, we ſoon find ourſelves apt to launch out, and to treat the ſacred Page itſelf, too often, in a ludicrous Manner. In ſhort, This increaſes our Fears, Gentlemen, and makes us the more ſollicitous for aſking your Aſſiſtance; in anſwering the forementioned Queries, and in reconciling the ſeeming Difficulties with ſound Reaſoning and the Word of God.

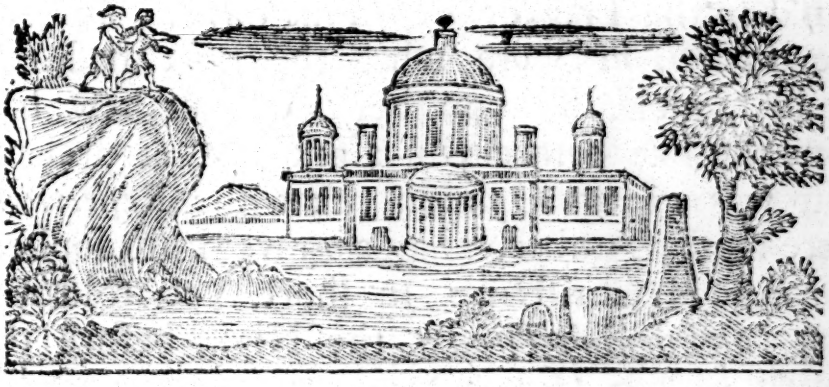
F I N I S.



MADAM,

WHEN I had laſt the Honour of waiting on you, I found you full of Thought; your Elbow gently reclin'd on the inimitable Shakeſpear. I ſoon gueſs'd (what you was pleaſed to tell me) that you had been converſing very lately with that Gentleman: For your Imagination was hard at Work; the Ideas which the Poet had convey'd were ſtill ſtrong and lively; and the Pleaſure and the Pain, ſeem'd to have taken their Turns, and to have made a very deep Impreſſion.

I remember my Curioſity ſoon grew troubleſome, and you as kindly ſatisfied it, in letting me know, that it was very true —— you was full of Thought; and, as you eaſily imagin'd, the Intenſeneſs of it was not to be conceal'd: But aſſuring me withal, that the Paſſions had nothing to do in the Matter; that you had been reflecting upon a Piece of the Roman Story contain'd in the Tragedy of Julius Cæſar; and, as the Reflections were what the Poet had not made himſelf, ſo you believ'd, but few had done the like before you; and yet, at preſent, you was of an Opinion, that the Reflections were neither unbecoming a grave Philoſopher, nor a good Chriſtian: In ſhort, you told me, that Calphurnia's Dream, the Night before the Death of her Huſband Julius Cæſar, and his Appearance afterwards to Brutus in the Fields of Philippi, was what had engroſſed your Thoughts, and occaſioned ſuch Reflections: For, as you believed thoſe Paſſages were no Fiction of the Poet, but Facts well ſupported in Hiſtory, ſo you as firmly concluded, that the Almighty had not been ſuch a Stranger to the Heathen Part of the World, as might generally be conceived; that ſuch Communications were to you convincing, that He had all along been, not only the God of the Jews but of the Gentiles alſo; and that there were miniſtring Spirits at Rome and Athens, as well as at Jeruſalem; to execute his Will, to reward and to puniſh in ſuch Manner, as might beſt ſerve the Ends of the great Governor of the World.

I then took the Liberty of reminding you, (and you ſeem'd to take it with Pleaſure) of another Heathen Lady, Pilate's Wife; a Lady, though in Quality inferior to Calphurnia, yet, in other Reſpects, much ſuperior; for ſhe ſaw the Redeemer of Mankind in Perſon, about fourſcore Years after the Death of Julius Cæſar;

and

and yet did not truly see Him as such neither, till she saw Him as that just one in a Dream. It was the same infinite Being, I likewise observed, that permitted Julius Cæsar's Appearance to Brutus at Philippi, as did Samuel's to Saul at Endor, though, probably, in a different Manner. Saul and Brutus much resembled one another in their Deaths; as being their own Executioners. —— Saul said to his Armour-Bearer, draw thy Sword and thrust me through. —— But Saul took a Sword, and fell upon it [a] And you told me quickly, Madam, what Brutus said to Strato, Hold then my Sword, and turn away thy Face, while I do run upon it: Saul and Brutus were both press'd hard by the Enemy; and why might not Saul then, you said, in Regard to the Appearance at Endor, speak as Brutus did? —— O Samuel, Thou art mighty yet, thy Spirit walks abroad, and turns our Swords in our own proper Entrails. You proceeded, Madam, in making a Reflection upon what had pass'd, very just and à Propos, which was, that since the Transition was so easy and natural from profane to sacred History, and 'twas evident from both, that Dreams and Visions, whether in the Heathen or Christian World, were derived and to be accounted for, from one and the same Almighty Power, you had often wonder'd, why there should be that Hesitation or Difference made (too observable in the present Age) in giving Aſſent to theſe Things; or why Livy, Plutarch, Suetonius, and other Heathen Writers, that you had often heard quoted upon theſe Subjects, ſhould find Credit upon much eaſier Terms, than the Writers of the Old and New Teſtament. All that I then reply'd, was, that there were too many (and ſome who made great Pretences to Learning too) who paid but little Regard to the Writers under either Denomination, ſacred or profane, when they talk'd of Dreams and Apparitions; ſuch Paſſages being rather made the Subject of thin Wit, and overflowing Raillery, than any ſober Debate, or ſerious Enquiry about the Truth of them: However, I was much pleaſed to find, I was then addreſſing myſelf to a Perſon truly Chriſtian, without the leaſt Mixture of the Sadducee; and, that Philoſophy, good Senſe, and a hearty Concern for, and Regard to Divine Revelation, had ſo far prevail'd, that I perſuade myſelf, 'tis your fix'd Reſolution, neither to ſubmit your Reaſon to the Caprice and Humour of any Bel Eſprit whatever, nor ſuffer yourſelf to be argued or laughed out of your Religion, either by the ſly Deiſt, or noiſy Free-Thinker. And, indeed, you ſoon gave me farther Proof of this: For we had ſcarce quitted the Plains of Philippi, and left off talking of Julius Cæſar's Appearance, but your Thoughts were carried to one of the ſublimeſt Paſſages in the Goſpel, led to it by the former Diſcourſe: Moſes and Elias appearing to three Diſciples at once, was, you ſaid, a Scene full of Wonder and Love; that you

---

[a] 1 Sam. xxxi.

then

then beheld it with an Eye of Faith, and hoped hereafter to have the ſame Sort of Knowledge (whatever it was) which Peter, James, and John then had in the Holy Mount: I begg'd Leave to obſerve, that our Saviour's Tranſfiguration, with the ſeveral Circumſtances attending it, is generally thought to point out to the Law and the Prophets, as all referring to and terminating in Him, as alſo to comfort the Diſciples againſt his approaching Paſſion, and to give them ſome Reſemblance of his ſecond Advent, when He ſhould come in the Glory of his Father, with the Holy Angels: Theſe were the great Ends unqueſtionably, that were ſerv'd in that Appearance on the Mount; and though that Appearance was extraordinary, yet your Inference, I think, was ſtill juſt, viz. That as the Souls of Men have been ſometimes ſummoned back from the other World to this; ſo there may be ſtill many weighty Reaſons in every Age of the Chriſtian Church, why Apparitions ſhould not wholly ceaſe. To this I added, that 'twas very certain, both good and bad Angels, do now, as formerly, ſerve the Purpoſes of an all-wiſe and infinite Being. There are miniſtring Spirits, and Powers of Darkneſs; we are put in Mind, to wreſtle with the one, and to expect Aſſiſtance from the other: And when God is pleaſed either to appoint or to permit it; theſe created Beings not only communicate by Dreams and Viſions, but are enabled to cloath themſelves with ſome Ætherial or Aerial Subſtance, and to aſſume the Likeneſs of of Souls that are departed and gone to their eternal Reſt; though the Manner of it be as much above the Reach of Man's Underſtanding, as the Union of his own Body and Soul is. I was going on, when, I very well remember, you ſuggeſted, that, though it was not to be doubted, but thoſe cœleſtial Beings did intereſt themſelves in the Affairs of this ſublunary World, and ſuch Execution of the divine Will and Pleaſure is probably what we are to underſtand by Providence; yet there remained a Scruple with you, (which you hoped I would ſoon remove) as, whether ſince the Eſtabliſhment of Chriſtianity, Appearances from the other World may be expected or allowed of, upon any Account whatever; and whether it does not ſeem to be forbidden in the Parable given by our Saviour of Dives and Lazarus, where we are bid to hear Moſes and the Prophets in Oppoſition to ſuch Appearances. You well know, Madam, I had then little more to reply, than that I thought we ought to be very cautious in preſcribing Laws to the Almighty; eſpecially in an Affair, where in all Ages before the Eſtabliſhment of Chriſtianity He has ſo remarkably diſtinguiſh'd his Wiſdom and Juſtice in the Government of the World. I had the good Luck, at the ſame Time, to recollect a Paſſage out of St. Auſtin in his Treatiſe about taking Care of the Dead, where (notwithſtandiug what ſome of great Name have thought to the contrary) he ſays, it argues nothing leſs than Impudence, for Fleſh and Blood to reaſon about the Proceedings ceedings of the great Creator in ſuch a Manner, as, when, and for how long a Time He ſhall pleaſe to depute from the other World, Meſſengers of his Will and Pleaſure to be perform'd in this: And as to the remaining Part of the Objection you made from our Saviour's Parable, I deſired, you would well obſerve at your Leiſure, what a remarkable Difference there is in the Manner of our Saviour's expreſſing himſelf: For, when Abraham returns his Anſwer, he does not ſay, or give the leaſt Hint, that ſuch who have departed this Life either cannot return, or that it has not been uſual for them ſo to do: Whereas, he is very poſitive and explicit, when he tells Dives, that there is a Gulph fixed, ſo that they which would paſs from hence to you cannot; neither can they paſs to us that would come from thence. But the Anſwer given is, They have Moſes and the Prophets, let them hear them; and great Reaſon there was for ſuch an Anſwer: For you may obſerve, Madam, Lazarus's being raiſed from the Dead, had no very great Effect among the ſtupid Jews; and if Appearances from the other World were once common among ourſelves, we might, perhaps, grow as inſenſible as they: But then, 'tis by no Means a juſt Conſequence to ſay, that therefore the Almighty neither will nor does act that Way at all ſince; or that the good Angels never have it in Charge, nor the bad ones ever permitted to communicate with this lower World, by Dreams and Viſions, or any other Way. Nor can the Belief of this be any Ways inconſiſtent

ent with Abraham's Anſwer to Dives; for the Concluſion, which we all ought to make from it is, that the Revelation which God has made to Man, contains all the ſureſt Marks of Truth for eſtabliſhing our Faith, as well as the ſtrongeſt Motives for our Obedience; and that therefore no greater Evidence can, or ought to be required, than what God has already given.

This, I think, Madam, was the Subſtance of the Diſcourſe you was pleaſed to indulge me at that Time. I am now, according to your Requeſt, to ſay ſomething more particular of the ſeveral Texts of Scripture, which then occurr'd in Converſation; and, withal, to ſet the Whole in the beſt and cleareſt Light I can, by the concurrent Teſtimony both of the Heathen and Chriſtian World, concerning the Matters then diſcourſed of in general only; by this Means, you was pleaſed to ſay, you ſhould be able to ſatisfy yourſelf and others in ſuch Points; and that afterwards, none ſhould have it in their Power to charge you ſafely with Superſtition, without incurring the Cenſure of Irreligion themſelves. Give me Leave only to remind you of the Promiſe made me, when I took my Leave, (being no ſmall Encouragement to this Undertaking) that the Length of my Letter ſhould be a Fault that you would eaſily pardon; and hoped all your Friends would do ſo too.

The Text of Scripture that firſt occurred in Converſation, was Samuel's Appearance at Endor, occaſioned by the Reflections you was making upon Julius Cæſar's preſenting himſelf at

Phi-

Philippi. I eaſily imagine, Madam, that you ſometimes converſe with thoſe, who object, that ſuch as talk of Apparitions, either miſunderſtand or miſapply the Holy Scriptures, or elſe are too credulous in Relations of that Nature; ſo that I may well expect the ſame Uſage from that Quarter, which St. Paul met with amongſt the Athenians, — What will this Babler ſay? I am very ſenſible, that Truth will always ſuffer, when the Management of it is in weak Hands; and therefore permit me, before I ſpeak directly to the Text, to ſhelter myſelf under the Authority of ſome great Man, in ſhewing, that we are neither engaging in a weak Cauſe, nor doing Diſſervice to Religion, whilſt we talk of Apparitions with due Sobriety, and in the Manner ſuch a Subject ought to be treated. The Authority, I am now going to make Uſe of, is what you may the more aſſuredly depend on, becauſe the Author has for many Years paſt encounter'd Scepticiſm and Infidelity in all its Shapes: His Armour proves impregnable; his Arguments ever unanſwerable. [a] " As for Ap-
" paritions, ſays that great Man, though there
" be much of Fabuloſity in theſe Relations, yet
" can it not reaſonably be concluded, that there " is nothing at all of Truth in them; ſince
" ſomething of this Kind has been averr'd in " all Ages, and many Times atteſted by Per-
" ſons of unqueſtionable Prudence, and unſuſ-

---

a Dr. Cudworth's Intellectual Syſtem, Page 700.

" pected Veracity. And whereas the Atheiſts
" impute the Original of theſe Things to Men's " miſtaking both their Dreams and their wa" king Phancies for real Viſions and Senſations;
" they do hereby plainly contradict one main
" fundamental Principle of their own Philoſo-
" phy, that Senſe is the only Ground of Cer- " tainty, and the Criterion of all Truth: For
" if prudent and intelligent Perſons may be ſo
" frequently miſtaken, in confounding their own
" Dreams and Phanſies with Senſations, how " can there be any Certainty of Knowledge at " all from Senſe? However, they here dero-
" gate ſo much both from Senſe and from hu" man Teſtimonies, as that, if the like were " done in other Caſes, it would plainly over" throw all human Life.

" And therefore others, being apprehenſive
" of this Inconvenience of denying ſo many " ſenſible Appearances and Teſtimonies or Rela- " tions of Fact, have choſe rather to acknow" ledge the Reality of Apparitions; nevertheleſs
" concluding them to be Things cauſed and " created by the Power of Imagination only;
" as if the Strength of Imagination were ſuch,
" that it could not only create Phancies, but
" alſo real ſenſible Objects, and that at a Diſ-
" tance too from the Imaginers, ſuch as where" by the Senſe of others ſhall be for the Time
" affected, though they quickly vaniſh away " again. From which prodigious Paradox, we " may take Notice of the Fanaticiſm of ſome
" Atheiſts, and that there is nothing ſo mon-

" ſtrouſly

" ſtrouſly abſurd, which Men infected with " Atheiſtick Incredulity will not rather enter- " tain into their Belief, than admit of any Thing " that ſhall the leaſt hazard or endanger the " Exiſtence of a God. For if there be once " any inviſible Ghoſts or Spirits acknowledged, " as Things permanent, it will not be eaſy for " any to give a Reaſon, why there might not be " one ſupreme Ghoſt alſo, preſiding over them " all and the whole World. — Even Democritus " was convinced, that the Stories of Apparitions " were not all Fabulous, and that there are not " only Terreſtrial, but alſo Aerial and Æthe- " rial Animals; and that this Earth of ours is " not the only Place peopled and inhabited, or " that all thoſe other vaſt Regions above lie de- " ſert, ſolitary and waſte. Divers of the anti- " ent Fathers, though they agreed not ſo far " with Democritus, as to make the Angelical " Beings to be altogether corporeal, yet did " they likewiſe ſuppoſe them to have their cer- " tain ſubtile, ætherial, or aerial Bodies: In " which Reſpect St. Auſtin in his 115th Epiſtle " calleth Angels Æthereos, and Devils Aerios " Animantes. —— The Scripture inſiſts very " much upon Demons, or evil Spirits, and de- " clares it to be one Deſign of our Saviour " Chriſt's coming into the World, to oppoſe " theſe confederate Powers of the Kingdom of " Darkneſs, and to reſcue Mankind from the " Thraldom and Bondage thereof. This proves " the real Exiſtence of Spirits, and that they " are not meer Phancies, and imaginary Inhabi" tants of Mens Brains only, but real Inhabi" tants of the World. We call them Wizards

" and Magicians, who aſſociate and confederate
" themſelves in a peculiar Manner with theſe
" evil Spirits for the Gratification of their own
" Revenge, Luſt, Ambition, and other Paſſions.
" Now, beſides the Holy Scriptures, there has " been ſo full an Atteſtation given to them by
" Perſons unconcern'd in all Ages, that thoſe
" our ſo confident Exploders of them in this
" preſent Age, can hardly eſcape the Suſpicion
" of having ſome hankering towards Atheiſm.
" As for Demoniacks, — We may learn from " the Writings of Joſephus in many Places,
" that by them was not to be underſtood Per-" ſons very ill affected in their Bodies ; [a] For
" he declares it as his Opinion, that by Demons
" were to be underſtood the Spirits or Souls
" of wicked Men deceaſed getting into the Bo" dies of the living ; and therefore the Jews in " our Saviour's Time were not at all ſurprized
" with his caſting out of Devils, it being uſual
" for them alſo to exorcize the ſame ; an Art
" which they pretended to have learnt from " Solomon. Joſephus gives the following Ac" count of it ; [b] God alſo taught Solomon an " Art againſt Demons and Devils, for the Be" nefit and Cure of Men ; who compoſed cer" tain Incantations by which Diſeaſes are cured ;

---

a As ſome Perſons now a Days take the Liberty of talking.

b Antiq. Jud. Lib. VIII. Cap. II.

" and

" and left Forms of Exorciſms whereby Devils
" are expelled and driven away; which Me" thod of curing prevails much amongſt us at " this very Day. Notwithſtanding which, we " think it not at all probable, what a late Athe" iſtick Writer has aſſerted, that the Heads of " the Jews were then all of them ſo full of " Demons and Devils, that they generally took " all Manner of bodily Diſeaſes, ſuch as Fevers
" and Agues, and Dumbneſs, and Deafneſs for " Devils; nor can we think, that the Jews in " our Saviour's Time either ſuppoſed all Mad-
" men to be Demoniacks, or all Demoniacks
" Madmen (though this latter ſeems to be aſ-" ſerted by an eminent Writer of our own) we " reading of Devils caſt out from others beſides
" Madmen, and of a Woman which had a Spi" rit of Infirmity only, and was bowed together
" and could not lift up herſelf, which is ſaid
" by our Saviour Chriſt to have been BOUND " BY SATAN: Wherefore the Senſe of the " Jews formerly ſeems to have been this, that " when there were any unuſual and extraordi" nary Symptoms in any bodily Diſtemper, but " eſpecially that of Madneſs (this being look'd " upon as ſomething more than natural) it was
" imputed by them to the Poſſeſſion or Infeſta" tion of ſome Devil. Neither was this proper " to the Jews only at that Time, to ſuppoſe
" evil Demons to be the Cauſes of ſuch bodily " Diſeaſes as had extraordinary Symptoms, and " eſpecially Madneſs; but the Greeks and other
" Gentiles alſo were perſuaded in like Manner,

" as

" as appears from Apollonius Tyanæus, &c. We " have alſo the Judgment of two very expe- " rienced Phyſicians, Sennertus and Fernelius, " that evil Spirits or Demons do at this very " Day ſometimes really act upon the Bodies of " Men, and either inflict or augment bodily " Diſtempers and Diſeaſes. [a] 'Tis alſo very " evident, from the Records of credible Wri- " ters, that ſince the Time of our Saviour there " have been Perſons Demoniacal, who have not " only diſcover'd Secrets, and declar'd Things " paſt, but future alſo; and beſides this, ſpoke " in Languages which they had never learnt. " The Phyſician laſt named gives an Account " of one Demoniack, in whoſe Behalf he and " ſeveral other Phyſicians were called in, and " all Manner of Remedies applied, but yet in " vain; and after having given the Reaſon " thereof, he concludes thus — Theſe Things " do I produce, to make it manifeſt that evil " Demons or Devils do ſometimes enter into the " very Bodies of Men, afflicting and torment- " ing them after an unheard of Manner: But " that at other Times, though they do not en- " ter into and poſſeſs their whole Body, yet, " partly by exagitating and diſturbing the pro- " fitable Humours thereof, partly by traducing " the noxious into the principal Parts, or elſe " by obſtructing the Veins and other Paſſages " with them, or diſordering the Structure of [a] De Mania L. 1. C. 15. de abditis rerum cauſis.

---

" the

" the Members, they cauſe innumerable Diſeaſes.
" Thus much I have thought neceſſary to ſay,
" as well for the Vindication of Chriſtianity, as " for the Conviction of the Incredulous; we " finding ſome ſo ſtaggering in their Religion,
" that from this one Thing alone of Demoni-
" ack's (they being ſo ſtrongly poſſeſs'd, that " there neither is nor ever was any ſuch) they " are ready enough to ſuſpect, the whole Goſ-
" pel or New Teſtament itſelf of Fabuloſity
" and Impoſture.

And now I perſuade myſelf, Madam, from what this eminent Writer has laid down, that you will not judge it an unneceſſary Introduction; and I hope all that I have to offer will be better underſtood, and find an eaſier Admittance into your Cloſet. Let Samuel's Appearance then, at Endor, be the firſt Thing to be conſider'd; and a ſhort View of the Context will, perhaps, lead us to form the trueſt Judgment of it. We find, that, at this Juncture, the Death of Samuel, and David's living in a Foreign Land, were the great Calamities that the Jews labour'd under. 'Twas this made the Amalekites to lift up their Heads, and Saul with his People to hang down theirs. Saul was in the utmoſt Diſtreſs, and the Enemy ſeem'd reſolv'd ſoon to puſh him in Mount Gilboa. 'Twas this occaſion'd the Night-Viſit that Saul made to the Woman at Endor; he diſguis'd himſelf ſays the Text [a]: and ſurely taking ana Verſe 8.

other

other Habit was then very proper, conſidering what Affair he was going upon, to break a divine Law, that was enjoyn'd under the ſevereſt Penalty to his own Subjects; and when, ſhould his Abſence have been diſcover'd, it might have made a ſtrong Impreſſion and added to the Confuſion his Army was then in already. He was grown old in Wickedneſs; and God in his Providence had now ſo order'd Matters, that his Puniſhment was near at Hand. Saul probably acted the Politician before, in obſerving that Law; and did it not out of any real Senſe of his Duty: He might be influenc'd by the Authority and Advice of good Samuel, when alive; or he might hope, by the Obſervation of this Law, to appeaſe the Almighty, and that the Sentence might be revok'd, with which Samuel had acquainted him, [a] The Lord hath rejected thee from being King over Iſrael; 'twas after that Sentence paſs'd, we read the evil Spirit from God was upon Saul [b]; and though by the Charms of Muſick, when David took the Harp, the evil Spirit departed from him; yet 'tis not unlikely, but that in this laſt Scene of his Life, the ſame evil Spirit troubled him, which, 'tis expreſly ſaid, did ſo, as ſoon, as Samuel had anointed David to be King in his Room [c]. Saul therefore did not hate the Sin; but he was willing ſtill to govern; and ſince he had loſt the Favour of Heaven, was rea 1 Sam. xv. 26. b Chap. xvi. c Chap. xvi. 14.

---

ſolv'd

ſolv'd to ſummon the Powers of Hell[a]: Vain, unhappy Prince! to have Recourſe to ſuch Methods, which his own Conſcience aſſur'd him were diſpleaſing to the Almighty, and conſequently muſt tend to his own Deſtruction: Well might he ſay to Samuel, after that the Woman had brought him up, God is departed from me, anſwereth me no more, neither by Prophets nor by Dreams: But after ſuch a Speech, how could Saul expect any Good from Samuel? Or, what other Anſwer could he expect than what Samuel gave him—The Lord hath rent the Kingdom out of thy Hand, &c. No wonder, that Saul, after this, is ſaid to be ſore afraid, and that there was no Strength in him: The Stings of a guilty Conſcience were then doubly pungent; this World and the next at the ſame Time conſpiring to make them ſo: The Wickedneſs of his paſt Life was then ſet before him in the ſtrongeſt Light: The Blood of the fourſcore and five that wore a Linen Ephod[b], was then crying for Vengeance in his wounded Soul; a potent Enemy was marching to dethrone him; and, by his own ill Conduct, David was become one of the Number. And that which gave the finiſhing Stroke, was, we may imagine, Samuel's bidding him prepare for his ſudden Change.—To Morrow ſhalt thou and thy Sons be with me[c]. And what ſhall we ſay to this? Shall Saul la-

---

a Flectere ſi nequeam ſuperos, Acheronta movebo.

b 1 Sam. xxii. 18. c Verſe 19.

den with Iniquity go to the ſame Place of Reſt with Samuel, or even with his own Son Jonathan? By no means: But we are rather to underſtand by this Expreſſion, that Saul and his three Sons ſhould be on the other Side of the Grave,* or in a State of Death to Morrow, as well as Samuel; ſo far they ſhould be with him, as to know the Regions of the other World, which they were now Strangers to in this Life; but nothing more, as to the Condition and State of their Souls; Saul, no doubt, expected to converſe with the real Soul of Samuel, and not with any Spectre or Phantom; Samuel had done him good Offices, whilſt he was alive; and therefore Saul might flatter himſelf, that Samuel would aſſiſt him ſome Way or other in this great Extremity. But wherefore doſt thou aſk of me, ſays Samuel, ſeeing the Lord is departed from thee, and is become thine Enemy? Madam, Obſerve the ſtrange Alteration in Saul: When Samuel was on this Side the Grave, Saul ſlighted his Advice, though commanded by the Almighty to hearken to him; when dead, he's as importunate to have it, though in a Way that the ſame infinite Being had forbid, and therefore muſt know, could not be for his good. The Woman's ſudden Exclamation, [a] in crying

---

* Hell, ſays Mr. Ainſworth, ſignifies a State, where even the beſt Men come, &c. See Gen. xxxvii. 35. See Mr. Johnſton on the Pſalms, in the Word Hell.

[a] Verſe xii.

out

out with a loud Voice, when ſhe firſt ſaw Samuel, implies, I ſhould think, ſomething extraordinary in the Appearance, more than ſhe had been us'd to on the like Occaſions; perhaps, by the Appearance, ſhe was inform'd, that 'twas her Sovereign who was then applying to her, and was apprehenſive that he was laying a Snare for her Life, as ſhe objected to him, when he firſt came to her [a]; which was ſufficient to put her into that Confuſion, and to make her ſay, why haſt thou deceived me? For, thou art Saul [b]: Or, it may be, Samuel's ariſing out of the Earth might be in a different Manner, and not agreeable with the common Rules of Necromancy. 'Tis certain, there is no Sort of Divination ſo antient as this; and ſeveral Heathen Writers of the beſt Authority aſſure us, that it was commonly practiced in the Eaſtern Parts of the World. When the Woman ſaid, I ſaw Gods aſcending out of the Earth [c]; It may poſſibly be underſtood in the Language or Way of ſpeaking peculiar to Perſons of that Profeſſion; though I rather ſuſpect it to be an honourary Sort of Speech, in the Plural Number inſtead of the Singular, in Regard to the Perſon of Samuel: For Saul immediately ſubjoyns in the Singular [d]: What Form is he of? And ſhe anſwers in the Singular likewiſe, An old Man cometh up, and he is covered with a Mantle; and the uſing the Plural

---

a Verſe 9. b Verſe xii. c Verſe 13.
d Verſe 14.

Number inſtead of the Singular upon ſuch Account, often occurs in Scripture; particularly, where Moſes is enjoyning Reverence due to Magiſtrates, [a] Thou ſhalt not revile the Gods. Upon the Whole, by the Account which the Scripture has given us of this Matter, the Woman of Endor ſaw the Form of Samuel, but heard no Voice, whereas Saul heard the Voice, but ſaw not the Form.

You may now expect, Madam, that I ſhould proceed in making a more particular Enquiry concerning Samuel's Appearance at Endor; Endor, was a Place, we read [b], on the other Side Jordan, belonging to the Tribe of Manaſſeh; but 'tis ſaid, the Children of Manaſſeh could not drive out the Inhabitants of thoſe Cities, where their Lot was, but the Canaanites would dwell in that Land. 'Tis ſaid in the Book of Judges [c], that God would not drive them out, in Order to prove Iſrael, and that the Children of Iſrael dwelt among the Canaanites, &c. and they took their Daughters to be their Wives, and gave their Daughters to their Sons, and ſerved their Gods. Here we ſee the Reaſon of thoſe Laws, which God gave to the Iſraelites againſt Idolatry, Witchcraft, Divination, and dealing with Familiar Spirits. The Law more immediately relating to Saul in this Affair at Endor, runs thus, — Regard not them that have familiar Spirits, neither ſeek

---

a Exod. xxii. 28. b Joſhua xvii. c Chap. ii. 3.

after

after Wizards to be defiled by them: I am the Lord your God. A Man or Woman that hath a familiar Spirit, or that is a Wizard, ſhall ſurely be put to Death, —— or a Charmer, or a Conſulter with familiar Spirits, or a Wizard, or a Necromancer: For all that do theſe Things are an Abomination unto the Lord: And becauſe of theſe Abominations, the Lord thy God doth drive the Nations out from before thee [a]. The Word Familiar, though not in the Original, yet our Tranſlators have thought fit to uſe that Epithet, ſince we don't ſeem, no more than the Greeks and Latins, to have any one Word expreſſive, or ſufficient to give us any tolerable Notion of ſuch an Operation. St. Paul tells us of a young Pythoneſs, whom he met at Philippi [b], who dealt with a Spirit in this familiar Manner; and Origen in his Diſpute with Celſus [c], gives a particular Account of Pythia's Familiarity with ſuch impure Spirits. St. Chryſoſtom does the ſame Thing, when he comments upon thoſe Words of St. Paul to the Corinthians [d], Ye know that ye were Gentiles carried away unto theſe dumb Idols, even as ye were led. [e] St. Chryſoſtom there tells his Auditors, that if his Diſcourſe on that Subject was not neceſſary, Modeſty would incline him to ſay nothing of ſuch Familiarity: For the Woman, that was to divine, did firſt a Levit. xix. 31, xx. 27. Deut. xviii, 11, 12.

---

b Acts xvi, 16. c Lib. VII. d 1 Cor. xii. 2. e Hom. 29.

of

of all receive the infernal Spirit in the moſt impure and filthy Manner, afterwards rav'd and foam'd, and then talk'd like a drunken Woman. The Woman at Endor had not only a familiar Spirit, but ſhe likewiſe practiſed Necromancy, viz. divining from the Appearance of dead People, ſummoned for that Purpoſe: For Saul's Requeſt is, firſt, that ſhe would divine unto him by the familiar Spirit, and bring him up whom he ſhould name unto her [a]. When ſhe was once poſſeſſed, ſhe was then enabled to do the other. The Hebrew Writers, when they comment upon this Part of the Jewiſh Law, tell us, That the Perſon deceaſed aſcends between the Legs of the Diviner, and either ſits there or at the Armpits, uttering in a low Voice, as if it came from ſome Cavern or hollow Part of the Earth [b]. This Jewiſh Law, moreover, was ſometimes broke by the Diviner's conſulting with Images; among the Heathen, the King of Babylon is taken Notice of by the Prophet [c], as ſtanding at the parting of the Way, at the Head of the two Ways, to uſe Divination: He made his Arrows or his Knives bright, he conſulted with Images or Teraphim, he looked in the Liver. Theſe Teraphim, or Images, were a Sort of Houſhold Gods, of which I don't doubt but you have often read, in Roman aud other Hiſtory. Suetonius tells us, in the Life of Nero, that he always kept a Verſe 8. b Vid. Crit. Sacr. in Lev. xix. 31. c Ezek. xxi. 21.

---

one

one of these little Images by him, and boasted that he knew Things to come by the Advice of such Image; this is less to be wonder'd at, when we read in the Holy Scriptures of Laban's keeping and consulting these little Images, which he calls his Gods, when he wrongfully taxed his Son-in-Law Jacob with carrying them away [a]; and, probably, his Daughter Rachel might do it, either to hinder his divining which Way she and her Husband were gone, or else by that Means to take her Father off from Idolatry. The Jews and others agree, says Mr. Mede [b], that these Teraphim were small Images made under a certain Constellation, which they used to consult, both in Things doubtful and Things future, supposing they had a Power to this Effect, received from heavenly Influence; much like to Puppets made of Wax and like Matter, which our Wizards still use unto like Purposes; and therefore, says the Prophet, [b] Surely the Teraphims or Images have spoken Vanity, and the Soothsayers have seen a Lye, and the Dreamers have told a vain Thing. Dr. Spencer, in his learned Discourse of the Laws of the Hebrews, when talking of these Matters, says, 'Tis not deny'd, but that there were Images of a much larger Size than these Teraphims, that serv'd the same Purpose, by delivering the Answers that their Gods gave: Such he takes it was that famous Statue of

---

[a] Gen. xxxi. [b] B. I. Disc. 36. [c] Zech. x. 2.

Mem-

Memnon, that became Vocal when the Rays of the Sun darted on it: But ſince theſe were moſt of them fixed in Temples, or ſome publick Places, and therefore could not be always at Hand, the Heathen invented theſe leſſer Sort, to ſupply the Abſence of the greater [a]. Thus much, Madam, I was willing to obſerve, concerning the Law, to which this Tranſaction at Endor does more immediately relate; and, I hope, the little that has been obſerved, may give you ſome Satisfaction, as well concerning ſuch as divine by familiar Spirits, as alſo by Necromancy, or by infernal Spirits that are invok'd and appear outwardly for that Purpoſe.

I proceed then to make Enquiry concerning Samuel's Appearance; whether this was ſubject to the Will and Pleaſure of any Demon, or whether the Almighty thought fit to interpoſe in any particular Manner, and to hinder what Saul deſign'd, and the Woman was going about, but, perhaps, might not put in Execution. The Text ſays, it was Samuel: But was it Samuel, riſen from the Dead, with the ſame Body and Soul that were formerly united? Or, was it Samuel's Body only, animated by ſome other immaterial Subſtance? Or, was it Samuel with his Soul only, aſſuming ſome Æthereal Vehicle? Or, was this a Reſemblance only of Samuel, effected, thro' God's Permiſſion, by ſome Aerial Demon? As to Samuel's Reſur-

---

[a] Lib. III. Cap. III. S. 9.

rection

rection with Body and Soul, 'tis not probable, that God would ſuffer it, conſidering all the Circumſtances of the Fact; and as 'tis unlikely that his Body only, or the bare Trunk ſhould be made Uſe of in this Affair. Let Samuel then be firſt conſidered as to his Soul only —— If we might allow, as the Romaniſts do, the Book of Eccleſiaſticus to be Canonical, there would be no Room for any Scruple: The Author of that Book (ſo full of excellent Morality) gives an Hiſtorical Account of Samuel, which we may ſafely admit as Canonical, becauſe we find it all contain'd in the firſt Book of Samuel: And after he has recounted the glorious Things done by that great Man, when alive, he adds, as the Concluſion of the Whole, and after his Death he propheſied, and ſhewed the King his End, and lift up his Voice from the Earth in Propheſy, to blot out the Wickedneſs of the People [a]. I dare ſay, Madam, you don't think this Paſſage induced the antient Fathers of the Chriſtian Church to reckon this Book Apocryphal; ſo far from it, that I can aſſure you, many of them are of the Opinion, that it was the real Soul of Samuel that appeared at Endor, and ſome of them have quoted that Book for the ſame Purpoſe. So thought Joſephus among the Jews, Juſtin the Martyr, St. Baſil, St. Ambroſe, and St. Auſtin. When I ſay the Fathers of the Chriſtian Church, I perſuade myſelf, that you do not ſo underſtand me, [a] Chap. xlvi. 20.

as if I was tranſgreſſing the Command of our Saviour, who bids us call no Man our Father upon the Earth; for one is our Father which is in Heaven [a], or that the Expreſſion is uſed by me in the Manner the haughty and ambitious Jews uſed it, when they glory'd, one being of Paul, another of Apollos, another of Cephas [b]. St. Paul was, indeed, eminently a Father to the Corinthians; and in the ſame Senſe may the Reſt of the Apoſtles be ſo called, in Regard to their Inſtructions, and their being, under Chriſt, the great Founders of the Chriſtian Religion. Their Succeſſors, thoſe great Lights of the Chriſtian Church, for Six hundred Years after, have been juſtly thought deſerving the ſame Appellation, in Regard to their Piety and great Learning; but, I would not be here miſtaken, as if, under the Notion of Fathers, I was for ſetting up an Infallibility of Judgment, when I quote theſe Gentlemen. I as much diſlike that Notion, as I do that other, of eſtabliſhing every one's private Judgment, attended with ſuch ill Conſequences every Day amongſt us. The Writers, whoſe Authority I am now going to make Uſe of, were Perſons of univerſal Knowledge, and who gave their Opinion with ſingular Modeſty, after much Thought and ſerious Reflection; and (as appears particularly in the Caſe of St. Auſtin) if upon a Review they ſaw their Miſtake, they

---

a Mat. xxiii. 9. b 1 Cor. iii.

readily

readily retracted; * and, on that Account, they are the more to be rely'd on. In ſhort, the preſent Age does not ſeem to be a Match for them, either in human Learning or Divinity: However, you need not be ſcrupulous here, Madam; for no Eſſentials or Points of Faith will be treated of. —— Joſephus was born but three or four Years after our Saviour ſuffered; this Man (who may certainly be allowed a competent Judge of the Jewiſh Affairs) gives us the Hiſtory of Samuel's Appearance much after the ſame Manner as we have it in our Bible; but ſays more particularly, that the Woman at Endor did not know what Manner of Perſon Samuel was; however, ſhe called him up, and was in great Diſorder upon the Sight of ſo venerable and divine a Perſon; and ſays expreſly, that 'twas the SOUL of Samuel that queſtioned with Saul; this we have recorded in his Book called Jewiſh Antiquities [a]. And this is the Author, Madam, who, though he lived and died a Jew, yet ſpake ſo honourably of our bleſſed Saviour. You ſee Joſephus is a good Witneſs in the Affair of Samuel; and ſo is Juſtin the Martyr, who lived not long after the Time of the Apoſtles, and who, in the famous Dialogue between him and Trypho the Jew, alledges this, as one Argument of the Soul's ſurviving in another State; that a Lib. VI. Cap. XV.

* I wiſh another Biſhop (at this Day) would take the like Method.

the Witch or Pythoneſs called up the Soul of Samuel at the Requeſt of Saul. And though Juſtin is made to ſpeak otherwiſe in a Treatiſe, called his Anſwers to the Orthodox, concerning the 146 Queſtions, yet that Treatiſe is, on many Accounts, rejected as ſpurious, or, at beſt, muſt be allowed to be interpolated, and many Things father'd upon Juſtin, that are none of his [a]. St. Baſil, who lived in the fourth Century, writing to his Friend Euſtathius a Phyſician [b], and taking Occaſion to mention the different Acceptation of the Word God, ſays, the Pythoneſs, that by her Witchcraft brought up Samuel, ſaid, that ſhe ſaw Gods, &c. And St. Ambroſe, who lived alſo in the fourth Century, is very expreſs in his Commentary upon the firſt Chapter of St. Luke; where he ſays, According to the Teſtimony of the Holy Scriptures, Samuel propheſied after his Death. [c]. St. Auſtin, who was Cotemporary with St. Ambroſe, ſays, in a Treatiſe that I mentioned to you, Madam, ſometime ago [d], 'Tis evident from the Holy Scriptures, that ſome are ſent from the Dead to the Living, as, on the contrary, that St. Paul was taken up from the Living into Paradiſe: For Samuel being dead, propheſied to King Saul whilſt alive. Although ſome have been of an

---

a See Dr. Cave's Hiſt. Lit. b Epiſt. 80.

c Samuel poſt mortem ſecundum Scripturæ Teſtimonium futura non tacuit.

d Taking Care of the Dead,

Opi-

Opinion, that it could not be Samuel himſelf, as not ſubject (they imagine) to the Power of any magick Arts, but was therefore rather ſome bad Spirit, fit for ſuch Work, which aſſumed the Likeneſs of Samuel: Whereas the Book called ECCLESIASTICUS, generally aſcribed to Jeſus Syriach, but from the Style and Manner of Writing, is affirmed to be Solomon's, commemorates Samuel, among other Holy Men departed, as one that had propheſied from amongſt the Dead. After ſuch great Names, Madam, I preſume, you will think it unneceſſary to have the Judgment of modern Writers, whether Romiſh or Proteſtant, in this Matter; and I need not obſerve to you, that the Writers, which I have ſet before you, lived too early, to be ſtigmatized with the trite and odious Character of being Popiſhly affected: And here I can't but obſerve by the By, that every true Member of the Church of England muſt think, that the Reformation ſuffers, and real Service is done to the Church of Rome, whenever Popery is ſaid to be found among thoſe glorious Lights of the Chriſtian Church. We do not, we muſt not, refuſe appealing to the concurrent Teſtimony of Writers even for ſix hundred Years after our Saviour, for the Truth of our Religion; and if Chriſtendom could be ſo happy as to agree on a fair Tryal in that Reſpect, and worldly Policy and Grandure not allowed to have any Thing to do in the Matter, Things would then be put upon ſuch an Iſſue, that Schiſm in a little Time would have nothing left to ſupport itſelf. Give me Leave then, then, rather than trouble you with any more Authorities, to make ſome Enquiry, what might probably induce theſe antient Fathers to conclude thus about the Soul of Samuel. They might obſerve in the firſt Place, what is obvious to every Reader, that as often as this Appearance is taken Notice of in the Hiſtory, there is no other Name given than that of Samuel: 'Tis ſaid, that the Woman ſaw Samuel—that Saul perceived that it was Samuel—Samuel ſaid to Saul—Saul anſwered Samuel—And Saul was ſore afraid, becauſe of the Words of Samuel. 'Tis natural enough to conclude, when Saul went to Endor upon this Errant, that he himſelf did believe, what he really wiſhed and expected, was come to paſs: There was no Scruple, nor even Fancy in him about the Matter; for he perceived, which is more than Fancy, that it was Samuel; and his Reſpects were paid accordingly; he bowed himſelf; and, during the Converſation, Saul ſays, I have called thee, that thou mayſt make known unto me what I ſhall do. If the Book of Eccleſiaſticus was writ by Solomon, as St. Auſtin takes Notice, 'tis no Wonder then, that theſe antient Fathers were of ſuch an Opinion: And who ſo likely to give a juſt Account of the Matter, as Solomon, who lived ſo little a Time after 'twas done? And what Reaſon could there be for the Author to extol Samuel for his propheſying after Death, if an infernal Spirit only appeared under the Reſemblance of Samuel? Theſe Antients might likewiſe obſerve, that the Predictions at Endor were were extraordinary and very particular, as to Saul's Sons and their dying the next Day: This was a Sort of Knowledge they knew was above the Reach of any infernal Spirit; for ſo the Prophet Iſaiah[a], Let them bring forth and ſhew us what ſhall happen: Let them ſhew the former Things what they be, that we may conſider them, and know the latter End of them; or declare us Things for to come: Shew the Things that are to come hereafter, that we may know, that ye are Gods. Yet, evil Spirits, by the divine Appointment, may, and often have declared Things for to come; but conſidering the ſeveral Circumſtances of this Appearance of Samuel, the Fathers might not think it conſiſtent with the Miniſtry of Demons, though 'twas to puniſh a very wicked Man. Beſides, if infernal Spirits, as has been often aſſerted, can neither uſe, nor endure the Sound of the great and venerable Name JEHOVA, this might furniſh them with another ſtrong Argument for concluding as they did; that Name being ſo often repeated in the Hiſtory. The Commiſſion, they might think, was too ſolemn, and the Subject too divine for a Demon to be concerned in—The Lord, ſays Samuel, has done for himſelf, as he ſpake by me—The Lord hath rent the Kingdom out of thy Hand—Becauſe thou obeyeſt not the Voice of the Lord; and if it was not Samuel, but a lying Spirit, to what Purpoſe (they might argue) argue) or what Occaſion was there for that Lye, when Samuel ſaid to Saul, Why haſt thou diſquieted me? And, the Lord ſpake by me. And though the Souls of the Righteous are ſaid to be in Peace and at Reſt, yet it might be no Objection to theſe Fathers, that therefore it was not Samuel, becauſe he complains that he was diſquieted and brought up from the Place where he was before in Joy and Felicity; they might conclude, God appointed this, as he had often done before and ſince, in Regard to the Souls of innocent and good People: They knew the Soul was often brought back, and ſuch Diſturbance given as quitting the Manſions of Bliſs; and whether ſuch Souls are called back to their proper Bodies, or whether they are ſummoned hither without the real Body, is not the Objection here; but whether God might appoint the Soul of ſo good a Man as Samuel to be diſturbed? This, I ſay, might be no Objection to them: They knew very well, that the Soul was brought back to the Widow's Son at Zarephath [a]; to another, upon the Body's touching the Bones of Eliſha [b]; they knew the Diſturbance given to the Soul of Jairus's Daughter [c]; to that of the Widow's Son at Nain [d]; to that of Lazarus who had been buried four Days [e]; to that of Tabitha at Joppa, a Woman full of good Works and Almsdeeds which ſhe did [f]; and to the Souls of a great a 1 Kings xvii. b 2 Kings xiii. c Mat. ix.

---

[a] Chap. xli.

---

d Luke vii. e John xi. f Acts ix.

many many good People at one Time, when the Graves were opened, and many Bodies of Saints which ſlept aroſe, and came out of the Graves, and went into the Holy City, and appeared unto many [a]. And though, Madam, the Appearance at Endor, is deſcribed as of one aſcending out of the Earth, yet thoſe Primitive Writers might ſtill think that no Objection to the Reality of Samuel's Appearance, but rather conſiſtent with the Scripture Account, in other Places, of Souls departed hence; and I can, moreover, aſſure you, that thoſe Writers did ſo underſtand the Scriptures. Jacob, when he thought his Son Joſeph was dead [b], refuſed to be comforted, ſaying, that he would go down to his Son; and the Original Word there uſed [c], for the Grave, is what frequently occurs in Scripture to denote the Subterraneous Manſions, and, as ſuch, is tranſlated by the LXX Greek Interpreters [d], but never by the Word Ταφος, or any other Word that ſignifies a Grave or a Sepulchre; and St. Jerom and others in the Latin tranſlate it to the ſame Purpoſe [e]; ſo alſo at the puniſhing of a lewd Company of Schiſmatics [f], they are ſaid to go down alive into the PIT; the ſame Word there uſed, as before. So the Royal Pſalmiſt [g], If I climb up into Heaven, thou art there; if I

---

a Mat. xxvii. b Gen. xxxvii. c שאל.
d Ἅιδης. e Infernum. f Numb. xvi.
g cxxxviii.

go down to Hell, thou art there alſo. * We very often uſe the Word Hell (in our tranſlating the Bible) improperly, becauſe our Language does not furniſh us with a Word that's comprehenſive enough: The Scriptures ſometimes expreſs it by the Way of a Periphraſis: As, He aſcended; what is that, but the ſame that deſcended to the lower Parts of the Earth? St. Paul tells the Philippians [a], That at the Name of Jeſus every Knee ſhould bow, of Things in Heaven, and Things under the Earth: And St. John, when he ſpeaks of the Book ſealed with ſeven Seals, ſays, No Man in Heaven nor in Earth neither under the Earth, was able to open the Book, neither to look thereon. You will eaſily imagine, Madam, that theſe Primitive Writers had ſuch Paſſages as theſe in their Eye, when they paſſed their Judgment upon this Appearance of Samuel from the lower Parts of the Earth. Irenæus, who lived not long after the Apoſtles, ſpeaks very plain about the lower Parts of the Earth, as the proper Reſidence for the Souls of the Juſt, till at the great Day they ſhall be reunited to their Bodies, and then

---

* Hell; not only the Place of Torments, but the Place or State of deceaſed Souls, or what we commonly call the other World. It is a Place or State, which all, even the beſt Men, come unto, ſays Mr. Ainſworth; who obſerves farther, that Jacob made Account to go thither, when he ſays (Gen. xxxvii. 35.) That he would go down to Hell mourning to his Son: And our Saxon Anceſtors tranſlate the Place in the ſame Manner.

a Chap. ii.

aſcend

aſcend into Heaven, and have a full Conſummation of their Happineſs; the Diſcourſe is introduced by this renowned Prelate, on Account of our Saviour's Deſcent into Hell; where he takes Notice of our Saviour's Saying to Mary, Touch me not, for I have not yet aſcended to my Father — " If therefore our Lord, ſays Irenæus, " did conform himſelf to the Law relating to " the Dead, that he might be the Firſt-born " from the Dead, and ſtayed till the third Day " in the lower Parts of the Earth, after which, " riſing with his Body, that he might ſhew his " Diſciples the Print of the Nails, ſo went up " to Heaven; how can ſuch People help bluſh- " ing, (meaning the Gnoſticks) who aſſert this " World to be the Place of Hell; but that " their Souls, when they quit the Body, mount " to the higher Regions above? For, ſince our " Lord retired, in the midſt of the Shadow " of Death, where the Souls of the Deceas'd " were; roſe afterward with his Body; and " then was taken up; 'tis evident, that the Souls " of the Diſciples, or Chriſtians in general, for " whoſe Sake the Lord did thoſe Things, have " a Place appointed them by God, above our " Comprehenſion, where they ſhall continue " waiting till the general Reſurrection; when " being reunited in a perfect Manner to their " own Bodies, or riſing as our Lord did, they " ſhall become Partakers of the Beatifick Vi- " ſion[a]. If you are pleaſed to know more of this Matter, Madam, you may ſee it fully treated of in Dr. Heylin and Biſhop Pearſon's Expoſitions of that Article of our Creed; the latter obſerves, when this was made one of the Articles of our Religion at the Reformation, that it was propounded with a certain Explication, and thus deliver'd in the fourth Year of King Edward VI. with Reference to an expreſs Place of Scripture interpreted of this Deſcent, viz. That the BODY of Chriſt lay in the Grave until his Reſurrection: But his SPIRIT, which he gave up, was with the Spirits which were detained in Priſon, or in Hell, and preached to them, as the Place in St. Peter teſtifieth; In Biſhop Sparrow's Collection, the Article in Engliſh reads thus, "As Chriſt died and was buried for us; "ſo alſo it is to be believed, that he went "down into Hell; For the Body lay in the Se- "pulchre until the Reſurrection, but his Ghoſt "departing from him was with the Ghoſts that "were in Priſon or in Hell, and did preach to "the ſame as the Place of St. Peter doth teſti- "fy." But in the Synod ten Years after, in the Days of Queen Elizabeth, the Articles, which continue ſtill in Force, deliver the ſame Deſcent, but without any the leaſt Explication or Reference to any particular Place of Scripture, in theſe Words, As Chriſt died for us and was buried, ſo alſo it is to be believed that he went down into Hell. You find the Paſſage in St. Peter's firſt Epiſtle[a], — He went and preached

[a] Adv. Hær. Lib. V. Cap. 31.

[a] Chap. iii. 19, 20.

unto

unto the Spirits in Priſon; which ſome time were diſobedient, &c. Why the Article ſtands now without Explication and Reference, is an Enquiry, not at all material to our preſent Purpoſe; and were it otherwiſe, I believe you would think it more proper for me to let it alone. The Paſſage ſeems to allude to what the Prophet Zechariah ſays [a], where he is exhorting Zion to rejoyce for the Coming of Chriſt,— As for thee alſo, by the Blood of thy Covenant, I have ſent forth thy Priſoners out of the Pit, wherein is no Water. The Prophecy concerning Chriſt juſt precedes this Paſſage, and is ſo quoted by the Evangeliſts concerning his Entry into Jeruſalem, Rejoyce greatly, O Daughter of Zion; ſhout O Daughter of Jeruſalem, behold thy King cometh, &c. And then, by Way of Apoſtrophe, the Prophet addreſſes himſelf to Chriſt, As for thee alſo, &c. (as above) Juſtin the Martyr and Irenæus; the one, in his Dialogue with Trypho the Jew, the other in his third Book againſt Hereſies [b] quote a Paſſage, as belonging either to Iſaiah or Jeremiah, which ſo much reſembles this Paſſage of St. Peter, that probably he might take it thence; the Words are, The Lord the Holy one of Iſrael had in Remembrance HIS that were dead, and were aſſeep in the Land of the Deceas'd, and went down to preach to them Salvation, which is from him, that he might ſave them. Juſtin is there a Chap. ix. 11. b Chap. xxiii.

---

upbraid-

upbraiding his Jew with the baſe Methods, they had taken, by curtailing the Holy Scriptures in many Places; and this Paſſage, he ſays, was one of them; the Annotator Sylburgius makes no Doubt, but St. Peter did refer to this Paſſage: And Feuardentius upon Irenæus, obſerves, that this Paſſage neither occurs in the Septuagint nor Vulgar Tranſlation.

After what I have thus offer'd, concerning Samuel's Appearance at Endor, I am apt to think, you may have ſtill ſome Scruples remaining about it; as whether it was the real Soul of Samuel, or whether the Almighty would permit any ſuch Appearance to be. We may ſafely affirm, that, without the Divine Permiſſion, it was not in the Power of any Infernal Spirit to have effected it. But whether, conſidering all the particular Circumſtances of the Fact, and the ſtrict Relation had between Saul and Samuel when alive, ſuch an Appearance may not be reaſonable; or whether ſuch Appearance be any ways inconſiſtent with infinite Wiſdom and Juſtice, ſeems to be the main Queſtion. Samuel, when he had anointed Saul to be King, might be ſaid to continue ſtill Judge of the People; though they were ſo fond of a Change in Government, and obſtinately affected the Title of King for their Governour. 'Tis evident, Samuel ſtill retain'd the judiciary Power, and was prime Miniſter in all Affairs beſides; 'twas the peculiar Office of Samuel to inſtruct, to adviſe, and to reprove Saul: But when he grew very wicked, and Samuel found all Methods unſucceſsful; he left left him with this Prophetick Sentence denounc'd against him, The Lord hath rent the Kingdom of Israel from thee this Day, and hath given it to a Neighbour of thine that is better than thou. This was the last Time that Samuel took any Notice of Saul; Samuel went to Ramah, and there mourned for Saul[a]; he knew, that Saul's Kingdom was soon to be taken from him, and was also really concern'd for Saul's Condition after this Life; the good old Man therefore mourns, though he was no Transgressor himself, for one that was a very great Offender, but without any Remorse for his own Sins. With these Thoughts the Soul of Samuel went down to the Grave: But at Endor, Madam, you have the same Words explain'd, that Samuel made Use of, when he took his Leave of Saul. Samuel told Saul, just before they parted, The Lord hath rent the Kingdom, &c. And here at Endor, he reminds him of this memorable Conversation, in the following Words[b]: The Lord hath done, for himself, as he spake by me: For the Lord hath rent the Kingdom out of thy Hand, and given it to thy Neighbour, even to David. But if this Argument be not sufficient for inferring it to have been the real Soul of Samuel, it may then, I think, be reasonably asked, whether any infernal Power was, or could be in it's own Nature, privy to such Discourse, as pass'd between Saul and Samuel when alive, and which

---

a 1 Sam. xv. b 1 Sam. xxviii. 17.

was

was afterwards repeated at Endor? It muſt be allowed, that to ſearch the Heart and Reins is a Privilege belonging to the Almighty: No Man, nor Devil, knoweth the Things of a Man, but the Spirit that is in him: And 'tis the Spirit that ſearcheth the deep Things of God: It ſeem'd a ſufficient Argument, that Chriſt was God, when he let the Scribes ſee, that he knew their Thoughts [a]; and were infernal Spirits conſtantly acquainted with the inmoſt Receſſes of our Souls, our Temptations would be more violent, and the Victory ſtill rendered more difficult. I know very well, the Reply to this, is, that ſuch Knowledge might, and often has been communicated to Demons, for executing the Almighty's Will and Pleaſure here. This I readily grant: But then, as I ſaid before, conſidering all the Circumſtances of this Appearance, why may it not be more reaſonable to ſuppoſe Samuel by divine Appointment divulging his own Thoughts, than to have them communicated, and then divulged in ſo ſolemn a Manner by an infernal Spirit? Or what is there in this unbecoming the Majeſty of Heaven? The greateſt Objection, to this real Appearance of Samuel, (at leaſt it has the greateſt Weight with me) is, that ſince Saul ſays of himſelf, juſt before he went to Endor [b], That the Lord anſwered him not, neither by Dreams, nor by Urim, nor by Prophets; that therefore, it ſhould ſeem incon-

---

a Mat. ix.

b 1 Sam. xxviii. 6.

ſiſtent, ſiſtent, to ſuppoſe the Almighty afterwards concern'd in giving him an Anſwer from the Dead; eſpecially when 'twas what he himſelf had forbid by an expreſs Law — This is the Subſtance of all that has been objected, either by any of the Antients, or by Leo Allatius, and other Moderns; you are then, Madam, to weigh in the Ballance what has been already offered concerning the real Appearance of Samuel, what the Judgment of thoſe Antients I quoted; and whether the Reaſons ſuppoſed to induce them in forming ſuch Judgment are of any Force: And, as to the preſent Objection, I ſhould think it might be ſafely anſwered, in ſaying, that Saul's wicked Intention of having Recourſe to Necromancy, might induce the Almighty to interpoſe, and hinder both him and the Woman executing that, which they were then going about to do, and yet at the ſame Time to give Saul the ſtrongeſt Aſſurances (not ſubject to any Illuſion) of the ſudden Deſtruction that was coming upon him. You obſerve, by the Hiſtory, the great Confuſion the Woman was in at Endor; what a terrible Cry or Howl there was, when ſhe was ſurpriz'd at the Appearance of Samuel. This Pythoneſs, we may conjecture, had not Time given her, to put herſelf in Order for playing the Magick Tricks ſhe intended; or, it may be, the Appearance wat not only ſudden, and therefore ſuch as ſhe might conclude ſhe had no Hand in, but was in another Manner, than what ſhe was before uſed to; and ſome Commentators have accordingly obſerv'd, that, probably,

bably, Samuel did not aſcend by the Rules of Necromancy, but in a Poſture quite different. I am therefore inclin'd to think, that Samuel's real Appearance may be very well admitted, without ſuppoſing the Almighty to have been conſenting to the Breach of any divine Law; and that it was by no Means inconſiſtent, that God, after having denied a wicked Man's Requeſt, in not anſwering him by Dreams, &c. ſhould take the Opportunity, and uſe Methods more agreeable with his own infinite Wiſdom and Juſtice, in denouncing Saul's Doom by that very Perſon, who had anointed him King, and made it his ſole Buſineſs to ſupport him in his Throne; that Perſon, whoſe Counſel he had rejected, whoſe Propheſies he had dreaded, and which Propheſies, as a Prelude to his approaching Miſery, he was to hear declared by him from the other World in a more full, awful and terrible Manner, than he had heard them in this. And thus, Madam, I leave the Whole with you, and will not venture to affirm any Thing farther in this Matter of Samuel, than in aſſuring you, that I pay the ſame Regard to the Paſſage already quoted out of the Book of Eccleſiaſticus, which the antient Fathers did. I could eaſily produce ſeveral very material Teſtimonies from them; from Clemens Alexandrinus, St. Cyprian, Epiphanius, St. Ambroſe, beſides that from St. Auſtin already mention'd, in Behalf of that Book; and many of them believed it to be Solomon's, though collected and digeſted by Jeſus the Son of Sirach. Our Church did did not ſettle the Canon of Scripture, or exclude this Book in the Articles drawn up in the Reign of King Edward VI. And when it was done in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, the Books then ſtil'd Apocryphal are no otherways diſtinguiſh'd than they were of old by St. Jerom, viz. the Church doth read them for Example of Life, and Inſtruction of Manners, but yet doth not apply them to eſtabliſh any Doctrine. By Doctrine we muſt underſtand ſuch, and ſuch only, as relates to any Article of our Faith. The Doctrine at preſent, Madam, is not of that Sort; nor is our Salvation in the leaſt concern'd, whether we reject or admit the Doctrine, which has been thus advanc'd.

After what has been ſaid then, concerning this particular Appearance of Samuel, I will now beg Leave to give you my Thoughts concerning Appearances in general: For ſhould you be inclin'd, Madam, to think as I do, concerning the real Soul of Samuel at Endor, yet we muſt ſtill think of it, as an Appearance particular and extraordinary, ſo order'd by the Almighty, it may be, for many wiſe and good Ends; but by no Means infer, that therefore the real Soul of Julius Cæſar was at Philippi; or that there may not be Reſemblances of Perſons alive but abſent, as alſo deceas'd; and Communications that Way, as well as by Dreams and Viſions, and yet the Souls of ſuch Perſons whether alive or deceas'd, whether good or bad, knowing nothing of the Matter, and no Ways privy to ſuch Communications appointed or permitted by the Almighty, unleſs he ſees fit to order it otherwiſe. It is in this Senſe, and no other, that I ſhall treat of the preſent Subject; and I am not without Hopes of giving you ſome Satisfaction, before I have done with it.

The Doctrine of Subſtances ſpiritual, or what, in Contradiſtinction to Bodies corporeal and viſible, we often call immaterial, is a Doctrine, which the better and more thinking Part of the Heathen World eaſily apprehended, and of which they were thoroughly convinced both by Reaſon and Experience [a], to the great Reproach of thoſe mungrel Jews, who ſay, that there is neither Angel nor Spirit [b]. The Author to the Hebrews ſtiles the Almighty the Father of Spirits [c]. Such Spirits muſt all confeſs, as well as we that are of another Mould, that 'tis he who hath made us, and not we ourſelves: Some of them were ſo unhappy, as to forget it, when through their Pride and Envy they loſt their firſt Eſtate, and are reſerved in everlaſting Chains under Darkneſs, unto the Judgment of the great Day [d]. Theſe are now diſtinguiſh'd by the Name of Demons or Devils; whereas thoſe, who retain'd the happy Eſtate in which they were firſt created, have now in common the Name of Angels, tho' different Orders, as the Scripture informs us. The one are continually roving about in this ſublunary World,

---

a Ariſtot. 8. Phyſ. & 12. Metaphyſ.
b Acts xxiii. 8. c Chap. xii. 9. d Jude vi.

ſeeking

ſeeking whom they may enſnare, and how to encreaſe their Kingdom of Darkneſs; the other as vigilant in taking heed to their Charge, as miniſtring Spirits ſent forth to miniſter for them who ſhall be Heirs of Salvation [a].

Now, Madam, by the Appearance of a Spirit, I would in general (or without taking the Word Appearance in the ſtricteſt Senſe) be underſtood, that ſuch Subſtances ſpiritual and immaterial, good and bad, have often been, and ſtill may be, manifeſted in ſuch a Manner, though not without the Appointment or Permiſſion of the Almighty, as to be eaſily apprehended by one, more, or all of our Senſes: But then, as our Senſes are to be conſider'd ſeveral Ways, ſo there are as different Ways, wherein ſuch Appearances occur. Sometimes the Communication is only mental; ſometimes the Repreſentation is rendered ſtrong to the Imagination; at other Times, the outward Senſes themſelves engaged in ſuch Appearance. You eaſily obſerve, that the Old and New Teſtament afford us ſeveral Inſtances for illuſtrating theſe Diſtinctions. Nay, farther, we there learn, that there may be ſometimes undoubted external Proof given of immaterial Subſtances being preſent, and yet no Appearance at all. 'Twas ſo, when by the Miniſtry of Angels the Law was given to the People; when there was enough to prove their Preſence, but nothing more

---

a Heb. i. 14.

perceived

perceived, than Thundrings, the Noiſe of the Trumpet, and the Mountain ſmoaking [a]. And ſo it was, likewiſe, when, by the ſame Executioners of the Almighty's Will and Power, the Courſe of Nature was alter'd, and the Sun and Moon ſtood ſtill at the Voice of a Man; When Joſhuah ſaid in the Sight of Iſrael, Sun, ſtand thou ſtill upon Gibeon, and thou Moon in the Valley of Ajalon [b]. I remember, you have ſometimes told me, that you had read over a great many Books about Apparitions, and that you thought there was juſt Reaſon to reject many of them as fabulous: I entirely agreed with you in Opinion; and I farther added, that 'twas not improbable, but the Degeneracy and Prophaneſs amongſt Chriſtians might be one Reaſon, why ſuch Communications by Dreams and Viſions are ſo rarely permitted amongſt us, as formerly. I ſhall be very careful, Madam, in offering any Thing to you upon the preſent Subject, but what I think is ſupported with the beſt Authority, as well as Reaſon; ſo far as Reaſon may have to do in the Matter. The great Miſtake, that People are generally led into, when they read ſuch Books, as you mention'd (and you frankly own'd it to be your own Caſe) is, they imagine, in the Affair of Apparitions and Communications from the other World, that the real Souls of Perſons deceas'd are concern'd, and acquainted with the Matter tran-

---

a Exod. xx. 18. b Joſh. x. 12.

ſacted;

ſacted; whereas we are rather to conclude, that ſuch Souls departed may be generally utter Strangers to what is ſo permitted or appointed by the ſupreme Governour; and that they continue juſt in the ſame State they were, upon their Diſſolution here. The Caſe has been often evidently ſo in Regard to the Living; and why may we not account for it in the ſame Manner, as to the Dead? I mean, 'tis a Truth beyond Contradiction, that there have been Perſons in all Ages, and in all Parts of the World, whether Heathen or Chriſtian, who have either by an external Appearance, or Dream, or Viſion, been adviſed, inſtructed, or acquainted by ſome Friend or Relation, in whoſe Reſemblance they could not be miſtaken; and yet ſuch Friend or Relation has not only been at a great Diſtance, and in a good State of Health, but, as it has afterwards prov'd, was perfectly ignorant of the Matter, as to ſuch Advice or Information given under ſuch Reſemblance. St. Auſtin, Madam, in that curious Treatiſe, which I have twice quoted already [a], gives ſome remarkable Inſtances to this Purpoſe; and he makes himſelf one of them. " It has been related, ſays St. " Auſtin, that ſome dead Folks, whilſt their " Bodies have continued above Ground unbu- " ried, have appear'd to Perſons living, either " in their Sleep, or in ſome other Manner, " they being wholly ignorant where ſuch Bo-

---

a De Cura pro Mortuis gerenda.

" dies

" dies lay, and that having ſignified where the " Places were, preſſed them to give Burial,
" which had been neglected. If it ſhall be
" reply'd, that theſe Things are not true,
" ſuch Reply (ſays the Father) may well be
" term'd impudent; becauſe 'tis not only queſ-" tioning the Authority of ſome Authors of " known Credit, as to what they relate; but
" 'tis arraigning the very Senſes of thoſe,
" who affirm that Things of this Nature have
" befel them: The proper Anſwer therefore,
" or Account to be given of theſe Things is,
" that we are not to imagine, ſuch dead Folks
" are any ways affected, or concern'd in the Af" fair themſelves, becauſe they ſeem to ſpeak,
" to ſignify, and make it their Requeſt to Per-" ſons living, in their Sleep or otherways: For " many who are alive often appear to one an" other in their Sleep; and yet ſuch, who ſo
" appear, know nothing of it themſelves, till
" they have the Account from the other;
" who declare that they ſaw them in their
" Sleep talking or acting ſuch and ſuch Things.
" If then a Perſon can ſee me in his Sleep, ac" quainting him with ſomething that's juſt
" come to paſs, or, it may be, foretelling ſome-
" thing that's yet to happen; when I, at the " ſame Time, am an utter Stranger to thoſe
" Things, and, probably, never ſo much as
" came into my Thoughts, whether that Perſon
" was up or no, when I went to Bed, or whe" ther we might be awake or aſleep at one and " the ſame Time or no, when he ſo ſaw me:

" Why

" Why is it then to be wonder'd at, that Perſons
" deceas'd ſhould ſeem to preſent themſelves to
" the Living in their Sleep, and to impart ſome " Things to them, which they afterwards find
" to be true, and yet the Deceas'd may be " unacquainted with ſuch Things themſelves?
" For my own Part, I believe theſe Things are " done by Angels, ſo appointed or permitted
" by the Almighty —— But ſuch is human
" Frailty; when any one has ſeen a Perſon,
" that's dead, in his Sleep, he is apt to think,
" that the Soul of the Deceas'd then appears;
" and yet, when he ſhall have ſeen a living Per-
" ſon in the like Manner, he's thoroughly ſatis-
" fied, that 'twas neither his Soul nor his Bo" dy, but the Reſemblance of the Perſon that " he ſaw; as if it was not alike poſſible, that " there there may be ſuch Reſemblances of de-" ceas'd Perſons in our Dreams, and yet the " Souls of ſuch Perſons knowing nothing of " it. When I was at Milan, 'twas related, as " a certain Truth, that there having been made " a Demand of a Debt, which had been really " paid by one that was then dead; but the " Son, on whom the Demand was made, being " ignorant of it, and affrighted at the Sight
" of his Father's Bond produced againſt him,
" and thereupon thrown into a deep Melancho" ly, wondering that his Father, when a dy" ing, and when he alſo made his Will, ſhould
" take no Notice of his Debts: Under this Per" plexity, the Father appear'd to him in his
" Sleep, and let him know where he ſhould

" find a Counter-Security in Relation to that " Debt: This being accordingly found and " produc'd, he not only clear'd himſelf, as to " the falſe and ſcandalous Demand that had " been made, but likewiſe recover'd the Bond, " under his Father's Hand, which he had care- " leſly ſuffer'd to lye out againſt him, when " he paid the Money. Now, here the Man's " Soul is ſuppus'd to take this Care of his Son, " and to have come to him when aſleep, and by " inſtructing him in what he was ignorant, freed " him from the great Trouble he was in. Like- " wiſe at the very ſame Time, when I heard this, " being then ſettled at Milan, one Eulogius, a " Profeſſor of Rhetoric at Carthage, (who " was once my Pupil in that Way, and gave me " the following Account, after I return'd to " him into Africa) during the Courſe of " Lectures which he was reading upon Ci- " cero's Books of Rhetoric, happen'd, when " he was overlooking a certain Lecture againſt " the next Day, to meet with a Paſſage that " ſeem'd very dark and obſcure. Not being " able to underſtand or to make himſelf Maſter " of that Paſſage, he went to Bed very much " diſſatisfied, and could hardly ſleep for think- " ing of it: But that Night, whilſt he was " ſlumbering, I, it ſeems, explain'd the Diffi- " culty, and made that intelligible to him, " which before was otherwiſe: But yet, it " was not I, but a Reſemblance of me, who " knew nothing of the Matter, was at a great " Diſtance on the other Side of the Sea, and

" was

" was either doing or dreaming ſomething
" elſe at that Time, and had not the leaſt
" Thought of that which then ſo much di" ſturbed Eulogius. The Way or Manner
" how theſe Things may be done, is what I " am at a Loſs to define; but let them be " done which Way ſoever, what Objection can " there be to our believing, that any one in his " Sleep may ſee a Perſon that is dead, in the " ſame Way that he ſees one that is alive?
" Both of them being ignorant and unconcern'd,
" as well in Reſpect of the Perſon, as the Place
" and Time, when ſuch Repreſentations are " made. Why are we not to believe, that " theſe Things are done by Angels, thro' the " Diſpenſation of divine Providence, who uſes
" both the good and bad, for excellent Pur-
" poſes, according to the Depth of his Counſels " which are unſearchable? Whether it be for " Inſtruction in ſome, or Deluſion in others;
" whether for Comfort or Terror; every one's " Condition is, either to taſte of his Mercy,
" or Indignation and Wrath: And when the " Church of God ſings of his Mercy and
" his Judgment, we are to ſuppoſe ſuch Ex-
" preſſion not to be without its proper Force " and Energy. In ſhort, let every one judge,
" as he pleaſe, of this Diſcourſe of mine: I will
" only add, if the Souls of the Deceas'd did in-
" tereſt themſelves in the Affairs of the Living,
" and they themſelves converſed, when ap" pearing to us in our Sleep, 'tis certain my own
" good pious Mother (to name no more)

 " would

" would never let a Night paſs without making " me a Viſit, ſince, when alive, ſhe followed " me both at Sea and Land, that ſhe might live " with me" This was the Lady, Madam, I remember you once mention'd on Account of ſome Affliction that had lately happen'd to a Relation of yours; and, as you was pleas'd to expreſs yourſelf, you wiſh'd you might be ſo happy as to copy after your dear Monica. She was, indeed, a Woman of exalted Piety; and when ſhe came to die, at the Age but of fifty-ſix, what a moving Scene was there between her and her Son at parting? I fear, I ſhall incur your Diſpleaſure, if I ſhould omit it; we meet with it in the tenth and eleventh Chapters of his ninth Book of Confeſſions; and I will be as brief as poſſible in relating it, though it may not be altogether Foreign to the preſent Subject neither. " When the Day of Monica's " Death drew near, and ſhe had ſo contriv'd " it, that ſhe and her Son might be alone, the " Diſcourſe immediately began about the Happineſs of the other Life, ſuch as neither Eye " hath ſeen, nor Ear heard, nor hath it en- " ter'd into the Heart of Man to conceive." St. Auſtin having for ſome Time expatiated upon the Subject, and obſerved, how poor and mean the Delights of this World are, his Mother replies, —— " Son, as to myſelf, there " is nothing belonging to this Life, wherein " I take any Pleaſure: What there is now for " me to do here, is more than I am able to ſay, " there being now an End of all that I hoped

" for

" for in this World: There was one Thing, " indeed, made me desirous of continuing for " some Time on this Side o' the Grave, that I " might see Thee a thorough good Christian be- " fore I died. This my God has abundantly " made good to me, in letting me live to see " Thee his faithful Servant, and able to de- " spise such terrene Happiness, as well as my- " self." St. Austin says, he does not well remember what Reply he made to these Words of his Mother; but when she was dying, and her Soul seem'd for some little Time to have taken its Flight, her Senses were soon restor'd, and she seeing him and his Brother standing by, she told 'em, " That as to her Body, they might " lay it where they pleased, but would not " have them trouble themselves about the " Manner of her Burial; All that I request of " you is this, that as often as you approach " the Altar of the Lord, you will not fail to " remember me.[a]" St. Austin was soon at the Throne of Grace after his Mother's Decease; The Prayer is heavenly, truly becoming so great a Prelate; and the pious Breathings, which recommended his Mother's Soul, exalted and really promoted the Good of his own. But this is all I shall say of it, unless you shall hereafter lay your Commands upon me to say more. I rather now proceed, in considering how we are

---

[a] Tantum illud vos rogo, ut ad Domini Altare memineritis mei ubi fueritis.

to

to account for theſe Appearances: And, for my own Part, I cannot ſee any better Foundation to build on, than what St. Auſtin has laid down. If this be allow'd of, we need not have Recourſe to any ſuch extraordinary Method, as might probably be the Caſe of Samuel; nor need we ſuppoſe the real Soul of Julius Cæſar to have been at Philippi, when Heaven was determin'd to chaſtiſe a wretched Brutus. Take the Reflection made upon it, as it ſtands recorded in one of the greateſt Monuments of Learning, that has appear'd in the preſent Age, (and which, 'tis likely, has a Place in your own Cloſet) Dr. Prideaux's Connection of the Old and New Teſtament.

" The Murder of Cæſar, ſays he, was a moſt " baſe and villanous Act, and was the more ſo, " in that the prime Authors of it, Marcus " Brutus, Decimus Brutus, Caſſius, and Tre- " bonius, and ſome others of them, were ſuch " as Cæſar had in the higheſt Manner obliged: " Yet it was executed under the Notion of an " high Heroick Virtue, in thus freeing their " Country from one whom they called a Ty- " rant; and there are not wanting ſuch as are " ready even in our Days to applaud the Act: " But divine Juſtice declar'd itſelf otherwiſe " in this Matter; for it purſued every one of " them that were concern'd herein, with ſuch " a juſt and remarkable Revenge, that they " were every Man of them cut off in a ſhort " Time after in a violent Manner, either by " their own or other Men's Hands.——'Tis

" evi-

" evident, an over-ruling Power of Providence " ſet up Cæſar as a fit Inſtrument for the Work " which he brought to paſs; carrying him " through all Dangers and Hazards to the full " accompliſhing of it; and after that, when " there was no more for him to do, caſt him " off to periſh like a Rod, which is thrown in- " to the Fire when no more to be us'd. The " Work was God's, but it being Malice and " Ambition that excited him to be the Inſtru- " ment in the Execution of it, he juſtly had " for the Reward thereof that Deſtruction by " which he fell —— He ſufficiently prov'd him- " ſelf to have been a terrible Scourge in the " Hand of God, (having, as Pliny obſerves, in " fifty Battles, which he fought, ſlain eleven " hundred ninety-two thouſand Men) for the " Puniſhment of the Wickedneſs of that Age in " which he liv'd; and conſequently he is to " be reputed the greateſt Peſt and Plague that " Mankind then had therein: But notwith- " ſtanding this, his Actions have with many ac- " quired great Glory to his Name; whereas " true Glory is due only to thoſe who benefit, " not to thoſe who deſtroy Mankind." I flatter myſelf, you'll pardon this Digreſſion; and I proceed to obſerve, that if St, Auſtin's Explication of Apparitions be allow'd of, we eaſily account, as Chriſtians, for thoſe Communications from the other World in Dreams, that have been ſo frequent in all Ages relating to Futurity; to the private or publick good; to the rewarding of Virtue and the Puniſhment of Vice. There is no one Thing, the whole World has all along been more agreed in, than this.* And though the Heathen were Strangers to the Angelick Diſpenſation, or God's governing the World in that Manner, with which we are well acquainted; yet theſe Things were carefully attended to by them: They knew, there muſt be ſome Power ſuperior to themſelves, who did theſe Things; the viſible Effects of ſuch a Power frequently admoniſh'd them, that 'twas their Duty and Intereſt to regard it. † "I am of their Opinion, "ſays the Roman Orator [a], who make two Sorts "of Divination; the one, done by Art; the "other, without any Art at all: The firſt Sort "are thoſe, who by Obſervation have learnt, "how Things were formerly, and ſo are bet-"ter able to form their Conjectures, how Things "may fall out at preſent: But the other Sort "are ſuch, who uſe no Art at all, who either "by a ſtrong Emotion of Mind, or elſe by a "free and eaſy Impulſe, without reaſoning up-"on the Matter, or making any Obſervation "or Conjecture from external Objects, have a "real Fore-knowledge of ſeveral Things that

---

* Gentem quidem nullam video neque tam humanam atque doctam, neque tam immanem, tamque barbaram, quæ non ſignificari futura, & a quibuſdam intelligi, prædicique poſſe cenſeat. Cic. de Divin. Lib. I, † Quid quæris, Carneades, cur hæc ita fiant, aut qua arte perſpici poſſint? neſcire me fateor; evenire autem te ipſum dico videre. Ibid.

a Ibid.

"are

" are to come to paſs; and the ſame Thing, " ſays he, often happens to People in their " Dreams, &c." The many Inſtances that Cicero, Pliny, Plutarch and others have given, and ſo well atteſted by their own, and the Authority of others, concerning Appearances, whether in Dreams or otherways, are certainly beſt explain'd in the Manner that I have already laid down from St. Auſtin. For, when Cicero tells us [b], from the Writings of Dionyſius, of that great Prince Cyrus, that having ſeen in his Sleep the Sun lying at his Feet, and thrice endeavour'd, but in vain, to lay hold of it; he was afterwards acquainted by the Magi (a wiſe and learned Sort of People that liv'd in Perſia) that by the Dream was ſignified, he ſhould reign thirty Years; which ſo came to paſs; Cyrus living till he was ſeventy Years old, and began his Reign at forty; who ſees not, that the Almighty was then governing among the Heathen as well as among the Hebrews, and, by his ſubſervient Miniſters, was concerning himſelf as well in the Dream of Cyrus, as in the Interpretation of it? " 'Tis obſervable from moſt of " our antient Hiſtorians, that when a People " had once diſtinguiſh'd themſelves in Wicked- " neſs, and their Sins becoming national made " them ripe for divine Vengeance, and neceſ- " ſarily called for a national Puniſhment, ſuch " Puniſhment was uſually ſignified by ſome pre-

---

[a] Ibid.

" vious Communications, from the ſame infinite " Power that was to inflict it." Hannibal, after he had ruin'd Saguntum, was favour'd with a remarkable Viſion, letting him ſee before-hand, that he was the Inſtrument deſign'd by Heaven to check the Pride and Luxury of the haughty Roman: The Account of this Matter is given us by Cicero [a], who likewiſe quotes an Author for it, that had been very careful in writing a particular Hiſtory of Hannibal's Affairs; and the Account is this: " Hannibal, when he had " taken Saguntum, found himſelf one Night in " his Sleep ſummon'd, as he thought, by Ju- " piter to attend a Council held by the Gods; " where being come, Jupiter commanded him, " that he ſhould forthwith carry the War into " Italy; and one of the Council being aſſign'd " him as a Guide or Leader in that Affair, and " he making uſe of him as ſuch, thought he " had already put his whole Army in Motion; " upon which his Leader charg'd him not to " look behind him; but this having rais'd his " Curioſity, he could not long forbear caſting " an Eye backward: When lo! a Beaſt of a " monſtrous Size, fierce, environ'd with Ser- " pents, and throwing down Houſes, Trees, and " whatever came in its Way: This wonderful " Sight induced him, as he thought, to ask " of the God, what might be the Meaning " of ſuch a Monſter; and that God anſwer'd

---

a Lib. I. de Divin.

" him,

" him. 'Twas to ſignify the Havock and Cala" mity that would befall Italy; and bad him
" proceed forthwith, and to take no Care about
" what might happen, behind him." This Dream or Viſion, Madam, ſoon unriddles that Reſolution of Hannibal's paſſing over the Alps, and his ſurmounting ſo many Difficulties; Difficulties, ſo aſtoniſhing, that we are in ſome Sort of Pain for the Hiſtorians, when they relate the Facts —— But ſo it was (as the Poet ſings) after this Viſion:

Conqueſt with Laurels did his Arms adorn,
And Rome in Tears of Blood his Anger mourn.

'Twas about ſix Years after the Death of Hannibal, and near two hundred before Chriſt, that the Temple at Jeruſalem had like to have been plunder'd of an immenſe Treaſure; but the Almighty prevented it by an extraordinary Apparition, which he appointed for that Purpoſe. We have the Hiſtory in the ſecond Book of the Maccabees. The Apparition, is expreſſed under the Reſemblance of a Horſe, a Rider, and two other young Men yet 'tis plainly ſaid afterwards, that the Almighty Lord appeared. Theſe Things were frequent under the Jewiſh Diſpenſation; and when we conſider St. Paul's Converſion; the Appearance to Ananias, and ſuch other Occurrences in the New Teſtament, we ſhall find the ſame Things done under the Chriſtian Diſpenſation likewiſe. That Dreams and Viſions, were very common in the Heathen

World, as well as amongſt the Jews, we find evident from the Accounts given in the Time of their Captivity: For 'tis not only ſaid of Daniel [a], That he had Underſtanding in all Viſions and Dreams; but alſo that the King of Babylon found him and his Companions ten Times better than all the Magicians and Aſtrologers that were in all his Realm. Had Daniel, Madam, lived in the Days of Hannabal, and convers'd with him, as he did with King Nebuchadnezzar, he would have improved Hannibal's Thoughts upon his Viſions, by giving him right Notions of God's Providence; and there would not, in all Probability, have been ſo much Time ſpent, in convincing the one, that the moſt High ruleth in the Kingdom of Men, and giveth it to whomſoever he will [a], as there was ſpent in convincing the other; for Nebuchadnezzar was firſt ſent to graze with the Beaſts, till his Hairs were grown like Eagles Feathers, and his Nails like Birds Claws; and after that, he bleſs'd the moſt High; confeſſing, that all the Inhabitants of the Earth are reputed as nothing; and that he doth according to his Will in the ARMY of HEAVEN, and among the Inhabitants of the Earth. Cicero ſays [c], 'twas upon Record in their own Annals, when the Roman Army was preſs'd hard by the Samnites, and P. Decius, one of the Tribunes was adviſ'd not to expoſe himſelf in the Manner he did, that he return'd

---

a Chap i. b Dan. iv. 32. עבר בחיל שמיא c Ibid.

for

for Anſwer, " He had already in his Dream " ſeen himſelf in the hotteſt Part of the Action, " but yet puſhing the Enemy with great " Slaughter, and gaining immortal Honour; and " the Event was anſwerable." Socrates, was able to tell his Friend Crito with great Aſſurance, that after three Days he ſhould die; which accordigly fell out; and he let his Friend farther know, that ſuch Fore-knowledge was given him in his Sleep, under the Reſemblance of a very beautiful Woman. Socrates was then confin'd, waiting the Will and Pleaſure of his Enemies: Heaven thought fit to ſoften his Paſſage, and that the Terrors of Death ſhould be leſſen'd by ſuch a Reſemblance. Sophocles, whom Cicero calls a divine Poet [a], ſaw that ſacrilegious Villain in his Sleep, who had ſtolen one of the golden Veſſels out of a Temple; Sophocles for ſome Time took no Notice of the Dream; till, being frequently admoniſh'd in that Manner, he went up to the Ariopagus, and gave publick Notice of the Matter: Upon which, the Ariopagites order'd the Perſon to be apprehended, who, being interrogated, confeſs'd the Crime, and reſtor'd the Veſſel. The Roman Orator in the Perſon of his Brother Quinctus takes Notice [b] of two very remarkable Dreams; ſo well known, and the Relators, Men of ſuch Authority, that he queſtions, if there be any one, that can poſſibly object to the Truth of them.

---

a Ib. b Ib.

The

The firſt is, of one Simonides, who having buried a Sranger that he ſaw expos'd and wanted that common Piece of Humanity; and he afterwards preparing to go on board a Ship, was forewarn'd by one who reſembled the Perſon he had buried, that he ſhould give over his intended Voyage, or that otherwiſe he would be Ship-wreck'd and loſe his Life: Accordingly he turn'd back; and the Reſt that ſet ſail, all periſh'd at Sea. The other, is, of two Arcadian Friends travelling together, who when they came to a Place called Megara, the one lodg'd at an Inn; the other at a Friend's Houſe; the latter, at the dead Time of the Night, thought he ſaw the other in his Sleep entreating him, that he would come to his Aſſiſtance; for the Inn-Keeper was going to murder him: The Dream ſtruck ſuch a Terror, that he forthwith got up; but after he had a-while recollected himſelf, and thought there was nothing of Reality in what he had ſeen, he laid himſelf down again; and falling aſleep, he was ſoon importun'd by the ſame Perſon, that, ſince he did not help him when alive, he would not fail to ſee Juſtice done, now he was dead; and for that Purpoſe, let him know, that the Inn-Keeper had thrown his Body into a Cart, and covered it with Dung; but requeſted, that he would be early at the Gate, before the Cart was gone out of Town; the Dream then made ſuch an Impreſſion, that meeting with the Carter next Morning at the Gate, and putting the Queſtion home to him, what he might have in his Cart;

the

the Fellow was ſo confounded, that he immediately took to his Heels; the Corpſe was dragged out; and the Inn-Keeper had the Puniſhment he deſerv'd. The Remark that Cicero makes, Madam, is this — What can poſſibly have more of Heaven in it, than this Dream? But why need we multiply Inſtances of this Nature (ſays he) or look back ſo far for them? You and I (Brother) have often talk'd of thoſe two remarkable Dreams, which we have had ourſelves; and the Event prov'd both of them to have been of an extraordinary Nature. Cicero there gives the Particulars too long to be inſerted. He readily grants, that Dreams are, many of them falſe, and, perhaps, obſcure: But then 'tis no good Objection, he ſays, becauſe ſome Dreams are falſe, that therefore none are true: And the Remark he makes afterwards, is, I think, excellently good, and deſerves the particular Notice of ſome Gentlemen [a], who are ſo apt to make themſelves merry with their own idle Dreams and thoſe of others, when in Reality they diſqualify themſelves, and are not capable of dreaming otherwiſe. Our Dreams would much oftner prove true, ſays Cicero, if we took Care to go to Bed ſober: Whereas, when our Stomachs are over-charg'd with eating and drinking, whatever Things then

---

a ——————— Corpus onuſtum Heſternis Vitiis animum quoque prægravat una.
Hor.

preſent

preſent themſelves, are ſeen in a confus'd and diſorder'd Manner [a]. And Cicero there ſhews from Plato, that Socrates was of the ſame Opinion, and gives us likewiſe a Philoſophical Account of it from the ſame Author; which I ſhall not trouble you with at preſent. I rather chuſe to obſerve, how Cicero refines upon thoſe antient Philoſophers, and treats the Subject in Hand, after ſuch a Manner, that few Chriſtians will be found to have done it better. " When the " Soul, ſays he, in our Sleep has once withdrawn " itſelf from its troubleſome Companion the " Body, it then calls to Mind Things that are " paſt, takes a View of Things preſent, and " ſees Things afar off, that are to come: For " as to the Body, when a Perſon is aſleep, he " lies as if he were dead: Whereas, the Soul is " then lively and ſtrong; and will be much " more ſo after Death, when it has totally got " rid of the Body: And therefore as the Diſſo- " lution draws nearer, its Operations are pro- " portionably more divine and powerful. This " is plainly perceiv'd in any grievous and " deadly Diſeaſe. Such Perſons have common- " ly Repreſentations made to them of thoſe that " are dead; they are then chiefly concern'd " for a good Name; and are moſt penitent for " their Offences, if they have liv'd otherwiſe, a Quæ quidem ſomnia multo plura evenirent, ſi ad quietem integri iremus: Nunc onuſti cibo & vino perturbata & confuſa cernimus. ib.

---

" than

" than became 'em. But that dying Perſons " do divine, or tell of Things to come, is " evident from the Inſtance, given us by Po- " ſidonius, of one Rhodius, who, when a dy- " ing, nam'd ſix Perſons who were much of " the ſame Age, and declar'd, which of 'em " would die firſt, ſecond and ſo on." 'Tis very plain from Cicero, there were a Sort of People in his Time, that gave no Credit to theſe Things; which makes him ſay —— I may ſeem to tell diſmal Stories and idle Tales: But I have heard you (Brother) tell ſomething upon the preſent Subject, that was plain Matter of Fact, and had nothing of Fiction in it; which was, that C. Coponius, a Man eminent for his Prudence and Learning, who commanded the Fleet at Rhodes, coming to you from Dyrrhachium (in Sicily) ſaid, that a Waterman belonging to one of the Rhodian Five-Oar Galleys had foretold, that Greece within leſs than thirty Days would be waſhed in Blood; that Dyrrhachium would be plunder'd; Men making their Eſcape by Sea, and leaving the Town behind them all in Flames; but that the Rhodian Fleet would ſoon have it in their Power to return Home: " You yourſelf could not help being " concern'd at that Time, and Marcus Varro, " and M. Cato, who were then preſent, were " under a very great Conſternation: And truly, " a few Days after, Labienus came, one of " thoſe that had been put to Flight at the Bat- " tle of Pharſalia; and all the Reſt of the

" the Prophecy was fulfill'd in a little Time. [a] Calphurnia's Dream, Madam, that firſt ſurpriz'd you, in reading Shakeſpear, and ſince occaſion'd all the Trouble I am now giving you, has very good Authority to ſupport the Truth of it, as you rightly conjectur'd when we firſt talk'd of it. Valerius Maximus, who writ about the Beginning of Tiberius's Reign, gives this Account of Calphurnia, which he introduces thus: " The Night before the Battle at Philippi, " (when the two Armies were drawn up ready " to engage; Octavius and Anthony on the one " Hand, and Brutus and Caſſius on the other) " Artorius, who was Octavius's Phyſician, re- " ceiv'd a Command in his Dream, under the " Repreſentation of Minerva, that he ſhould ad- " viſe Octavius not to ſtay in his Tent, though " he was at that Time very ill, but rather to be " carried out the next Day into the Field of " Battle; Auguſtus comply'd with the Admo- " nition given him by his Phyſician, being car- " ried out in a Litter; and whilſt he was in- " tent upon Victory more than his Strength " would allow of, Brutus forc'd his Camp; and " his Soldiers entring Octavius's Tent, puſh'd " their Swords thro' the Bed where they thought " he lay: And how can we aſcribe this De- " liverance (ſays Valerius) to any Thing elſe, " but to a divine Providence? There was a " late Inſtance, that made Octavius the more " inclin'd to hearken to Artorius's Dream;

[a] De Divin. L. 1.

" and

" and that was Calphurnia's Dream relating " to Julius Cæsar, who had adopted Octa- " vius. Octavius had heard, that Calphur- " nia had seen her Husband, the Night before " he died, in her Sleep, stabb'd in many Places, " and lying in her Bosom; upon which she was " very importunate with him that he would " not go to the Senate-House the next Day; but " thinking that he should be reflected on, for " minding a Woman's Dream, he was resolv'd " to go, and so was murder'd [a]. Suetonius, Madam, who liv'd in Trajan's Time, and writ the Lives of the twelve Cæsars, takes Notice of several Prodigies pointing out the Death of Julius Cæsar, and appeals to the Authority of an intimate Friend of Cæsar's concerning such Matters. He says of Cæsar himself, " That the " Night before he was kill'd, he seem'd in his " Sleep to be sometimes flying above the Clouds; " at other Times to be shaking Hands with Ju- " piter himself: That his Wife Calphurnia " thought, she saw the Cupola of the House " tumbling, and her Husband stabb'd in her " Lap; and on a sudden the Chamber Doors flew " open of their own Accord: But Cæsar scorn'd " to regard these Things, and in a scoffing Way " upbraided Spurina, that the Ides of March " were come, but yet no Harm: To which he " reply'd, with a low Voice, that they were " come indeed, but not past. Plutarch, Madam, who was cotemporary with Suetonius, tells us, that Calphurnia was the Daughter of Piſo (a noble Family in Rome) and that Cæſar upon his Marriage, made Piſo Conſul for the Year following; upon which, Cato proteſted, exclaim'd, and grew very Noiſy; that it was a Thing not to be endur'd, that the Government ſhould be ſo Proſtituted; or that Marriage ſhould have ſuch Influence that all Promotions in the Common-Wealth ſhould be made ſubject to a Female Adminiſtration. And yet you ſee, Madam, what little Power Calphurnia had over her Husband, when even his own Life was at Stake; notwithſtanding the Clamour of that Malecontent; and ſure, it had been much better for Cæſar, ſuppoſing he did part with the Reins of Government, when he firſt married (as Cato objected) not to have taken them wholly out of her Hands again, but to have made a juſt Compliment of ſome Part of it, for his own Advantage, and not ſtubbornly to have decreed her Judgment to be ſo much inferior to his own. Beſides, ſhe deſerv'd much better at his Hands, than his former Wife Pompeia. Plutarch likewiſe takes Notice of many more Prodigies relating to Cæſar's Death, than is done by Suetonius, and quotes Strabo as to ſome Particulars; among other Things of this Nature mention'd by Plutarch, 'tis obſervable, that Cæſar, the Night before, doing Marcus Lepidus the Honour of Supping with him, and ſome Diſcourſe happening to ariſe, what Kind of Death was moſt eligible, he immediately cry'd out, before any other, A ſudden Death; tho' he was buſying himſelf in ſigning Letters at the ſame Time. Plutarch lets us know farther, that the Arguments which Calphurnia uſed, and the Manner in which ſhe expreſſed herſelf, did very much affect Cæſar; eſpecially, when he recollected, that he had never before obſerv'd her to be ſuperſtitiouſly inclin'd; whereas ſhe was now impatient and affected in an extraordinary Manner; and had it not been for the vile Suggeſtions of Decius Brutus Albinus, thoſe Arguments had undoubtedly prevail'd: Calphurnia had ſaved her Husband, and Rome their Dictator. 'Tis the ſame Author, Madam, that gives an Account of the Apparition to Brutus. Plutarch informs us, that Brutus was naturally very Watchful, and by Exerciſe and Temperance had habitually accuſtom'd himſelf to ſleep very little; and his Cuſtom was to ſleep a-while after Supper, and then to devote the Reſt of the Night to his weighty Affairs; and after that, if he had any Time to ſpare, he uſed to ſpend it in reading ſome Book or other, till the third Watch; which was the Time, the Commanding Officers uſed to come to him: Brutus then, at the dead Time of the Night, when there was a profound Silence through the whole Army, being full of Thought and projecting with himſelf, as well about tranſporting the Forces out of Aſia, as other important Matters, and having but a dim Light in his Tent, perceiv'd ſome Body, as he thought, coming into his Room: And turning his Eyes towards the Door, he ſaw a Perſon of an unuſual uſual Size, grim and terrible in his Aſpect, ſtanding near him, but not ſpeaking a Word: Upon which Brutus taking Courage, ſaid, Art thou Fleſh and Blood, or art thou from amongſt the Gods? What would'ſt thou have? And wherefore comeſt thou hither? The Apparition with a hollow Voice ſaid, I am thy evil Genius, Brutus: But thou ſhalt ſee me at Philippi. Brutus, without any Concern, replyed, I'll ſee thee. There was accordingly the ſame Appearance at Philippi, but it ſaid nothing, and forthwith vaniſhed. Brutus told Caſſius of this Appearance, the firſt Time it happened: They had been often uſed to diſpute about ſuch Matters; and Caſſius, being fond of Epicurus's Notions, endeavoured to argue Brutus into a Disbelief of the Apparition: But Brutus found it true to the laſt. The ſame Hiſtorian, where he is running the Parallel between Dion and Brutus, ſays: "But "that which is moſt of all to be wonder'd at "in thoſe two Men, is, that a frightful ill-na-"tured Demon viſibly appear'd to both, and "alſo appriz'd both of their Deaths. 'Tis in-"deed the common Way of talking, among "ſuch as deny theſe Things, that no Man in "his right Senſes ever ſaw a Phantom or an "Appearance of any Sort; but that only Chil-"dren and ſilly Women, or elſe Men who have "an ill Habit of Body and a diſtemper'd Brain, "have ſuch idle incoherent Fancies come into "their Heads, ſuperſtitiouſly believing that they "are haunted by ſome evil Spirit: But if Dion "and Brutus, who were Philoſophers; grave

[a] Lib. 1. Cap. 81, 82.

was

"judi-

" judicious Men ; no Ways credulous, or haſ" tily giving into any Opinion, were ſo far af" fected with an Apparition, as to acquaint
" their Friends with it, I don't ſee how we can " well avoid admitting again the exploded O" pinion of the Antients ; that wicked deluding
" Spirits, envying good Men, oppoſe all that " they do ; injecting Fears and raiſing Diſturb-
" ances in their Breaſts, that they may ſhake
" and undermine their Virtue ; leſt by a ſteady
" and ſincere Practice thereof, they ſhould ob" tain a better Condition after Death than them-
" ſelves. Plutarch, you ſee, Madam, was no Sceptick, as to the other World ; and the old exploded Opinion he talks of, is certainly a good Chriſtian Doctrine now : But then, you eaſily perceive, that the Doctrine is not rightly apply'd, in Regard to Apparitions. Pliny, the Younger, that great Mæcenas of his Time, and as able a Stateſman under the Emperor Trajan, had this Affair of Apparitions very much at Heart ; and, when he had Time to ſpare, would conſult his more judicious Friends about it. There's a whole Letter of his [a] to his Friend Sura upon this very Subject ; which I'll venture to tranſlate, as well as I can : But very often 'tis not eaſy to put Pliny in an Engliſh Dreſs. " The " preſent Receſs (ſays he) from Buſineſs gives " me the Opportunity of learning, and you of " informing me, upon the following Subject : I a Lib. VII.

" have

" have a great Deſire to have your Opinion a" bout Apparitions; whether there really be " ſuch Things; whether they have their pe" culiar Forms or Shapes allotted them; and " whether ſome divine Power is concern'd in " it; or whether it be all a vain Chimæra, and " ſuch Repreſentations owing to our Fears only:
" For my own Part, what chiefly inclines me to " believe ſuch Things, is that which I hear " happened to Curtius Rufus. When he was " a Perſon low and obſcure in the World, wait" ing upon the Quæſtor in Africa, and one Day
" towards the Evening ſtalking about and mu-
" ſing in the Piazza, there appeared to him
" one, in the Shape of a Woman, bigger than " the Life, and as much exceeding in Beauty:
" He being very much ſhocked at the Sight, ſhe
" told him that ſhe was an African, come to " tell him his Fortune; that he would go to " Rome, there have Honours conferred on him [a];
" and after that would return into the ſame
" Province, veſted with the higheſt Authority,
" and there die. Now all theſe Things came " to paſs accordingly: Nay, moreover, when " he arrived at Carthage, and whilſt he was " diſembarking, 'tis ſaid, there was the very " ſame Appearance on the Sea-Shore, as he " had ſeen before. When Sickneſs at length
" had ſeized him, and he gueſſing what would " follow from what was already paſt; viz. the " dark and gloomy Part of Life, after a Scene

---

a Tacitus relates the Story more particularly.

" of

" of Proſperity; 'tis certain, he did not enter" tain the leaſt Hopes of Recovery himſelf, " whilſt not one of his Friends could ſee any " Reaſon to deſpair of it. Another Incident, " rather more terrible than the former, and
" every whit as aſtoniſhing, I'll give you an " Account of, juſt as I received it myſelf.
" There was at Athens a large ſpacious Houſe;
" but it had got an ill Name of being haunted,
" and no Body was able to live in it: About " Midnight there was a Noiſe; and, if you
" was very attentive, you might fancy the rat-
" ling of Chains one againſt another, and per" ceive ſuch ratling to hold longer, every Time
" it was repeated: Soon after this appeared
" the Reſemblance of a Meagre, ill-favoured
" old Man with a long Beard, a frightful Head
" of Hair, his Legs fettered, and his Hands " chained; and theſe he ſhook and rattled to" gether: This ſo terrified the Domeſticks,
" that they paſſed their Nights in a very ſad,
" diſmal Manner; want of Sleep threw them
" into Diſtempers, and, their Fears encreaſing, " often ended in Death: For even in the Day" time, though the Spectre was gone, their " Imagination was as ſtrongly affected, as if " 'twas really before their Eyes; ſo that the " Fears of the Spectre, when preſent, occaſi" oned Fears of a longer Continuance, whilſt
" abſent: Upon this, the Houſe was quitted,
" and left to the hideous Monſter to range
" about in alone: However, a Bill was put up
" upon the Door, if any one ſhould be incli" ned either to purchaſe or to hire it, ignorant

" of ſo great an Inconvenience attending it.
" There happened ſoon after to come to Athens
" a Philoſoper called Athenodorus, who read" ing the Bill that was put up; and the low " Price at which it was ſet, raiſing a Suſpici-
" on, and puting him upon making a farther
" Enquiry, he was ſoon let into the whole Se" cret; but nevertheleſs, nay, rather, upon that " very Account, he reſolves to rent it. Accord" ingly, when the Evening drew near, he or" ders his Bed to be made in the firſt Apart" ment forward, and calls for his Candle, Pen,
" Ink, and Paper; and having diſmiſſed all his " Family to their ſeveral Apartments backwards,
" at a Diſtance from him, he ſets himſelf to " writing; his Hand, Eyes and Brain being all " employed at once; that ſo his Soul might " have no Time allowed it, either for imagining
" the Things he had heard reported, or for " ſuggeſting any idle Fears. The firſt Part of " the Night, all was huſh and quiet, as uſual;
" afterwards the Iron began to be ſhook, and
" the Chains to ſtir: Athenodorus neither " looks up, nor lays down his Pen, but takes
" freſh Courage, and reſolves to ſhut his Ears:
" Then the Noiſe began to increaſe, and ſome-
" thing was heard to come forwards, as if it " was ſometimes at the Door, at other Times
" within-ſide: Then Athenodorus looks back,
" ſees and perceives the Apparition to be juſt
" the ſame, as it had been deſcribed to him:
" It ſtood and beckened with a Finger, as one

" does

" does in calling another to him: Athenodorus, on the contrary, let him know, by the " Motion of his Hand, that he ſhould wait a " little; and then falls to writing again: Upon " which the Apparition rattled his Chains " about the others Ears, as he was writing: " Athenodorus looks back again, and ſees the " Apparition beckoning as before; upon which, " immediately he takes up his Candle, and follows it. It went on very ſlowly, as if its " Chains had been Burthenſome: After it had " turn'd aſide into a Court-Yard belonging to " the Houſe, it ſoon vaniſhes, leaving its " Companion Athenodorus; who being thus " left alone, gets ſome Graſs and Leafes, and " lays them in a Heap, to mark the Place of " their parting. The next Day he goes to the " Magiſtrates, and adviſes them to give Orders, to have the Place ſearch'd: Upon digging; Bones are found link'd together, bare " and corroded by the Chains, after Time and " Mother Earth had corrupted the Fleſh: The " Bones being laid together, have publick Burial given them: After the Funeral Rites " were over, the Houſe was no longer haunted. " And thoſe, who affirm this Matter to be true, " are Perſons that I give Credit to. One Thing " more, I am able to aver the Truth of myſelf: I have a Domeſtick, called Mark, no " illiterate Fellow; who has a younger Brother that lies in the ſame Bed with him: He " one Night thought he ſaw a Perſon ſitting " up in his Bed, clapping a Pair of Sciſſors to

" his Head, and cutting the Hair off from the " very Crown: When 'twas Day-light, he found
" the Crown of his Head ſhav'd, and the Hairs " lying about upon the Bed. Some little Time " after that, another Thing happen'd of the " like Nature, which ſerves to confirm the for" mer. One of the Boys being aſleep, with " many more in the Lodging-room belong" ing to Servants, two Perſons in white
" Tunicks, ſeem'd to come through the Window,
" and to clip off his Hair, as he lay in Bed;
" and after this, went back again the ſame
" Way they came in: When Day appear'd,
" this Boy's Head was likewiſe found to be " ſhav'd, and the Locks of Hair ſcatter d about.
" Nothing remarkable follow'd, unleſs, it may " be that I was not arraign'd at the Bar; as I
" ſhould have been, if Domitian had liv'd a " little longer, under whoſe Reign theſe Things
" happen'd: For one Carus having turn'd an In-" former againſt me, the Libel was found in " Domitian's Desk: From which Event, there's " Room for Conjecture, that, as 'tis the Cuſtom
" for Defendants to let their Hair grow long,
" ſo the cutting off the Hair from my two " Servants might ſignify, that the Danger which " threatned their Maſter would ſoon be over.
" I beg of you then, to exert yourſelf, and " ſhew the Learning you are Maſter of, upon
" this Occaſion: 'Tis a Subject, that deſerves
" to be ſeriouſly and thoroughly conſider'd by
" you: Nor yet am I unworthy, to be made
" wiſer by your diffuſive Knowledge. More-

" over,

" over, tho' you can argue, as you are uſed to " do, on either Side of the Queſtion; yet do it " ſtrenuouſly on one Side, leſt you leave me " in Suſpence; and when the very Reaſon of " my conſulting you was, that there might be " no more doubting of the Matter. Farewel." You ſee, Madam, with what an honeſt Simplicity this great Stateſman talks of Apparitions. Tho' he makes a Compliment to Sura for farther Information, yet, you may obſerve, he is rather inſtructing than inquiring of his Friend at the ſame Time. His own ſound Judgment was ſufficiently well known through the whole Roman Empire; nor was there a greater Patron of Learning, or any one leſs a Stranger to it, than himſelf: But what makes him ſhine the moſt in the Chriſtian World, is, the handſome Apology he makes for the Chriſtians, when he writes to his great Maſter Trajan: " He lets him know, that the Chriſtians " were a People, not addicted to any Sort of " Wickedneſs, as far as he was able to diſco- " ver; nor was any Thing done by them con- " trary, to the Roman Laws: For, as to Adul- " tery and other enormous Crimes of that Na- " ture, they were Things which they utterly " abominated——— only, they caball'd, in " getting together before Day-break, to ſing " their Hymns to a certain God called Chriſt." The Chriſtians, you ſee, in the Beginning of the ſecond Century, extorted much the ſame Confeſſion from Pliny, as the great Author and Finiſher of our Faith did from Pilate, What evil

hath

hath he done? I find no Fault in this Man. I am here reminded of putting an End to this long Letter, and of giving you ſhortly the Trouble of another concerning the Dream of Pilate's Wife. But I am ſenſible, I have not yet acquitted myſelf of the Promiſe I made you, till I ſay ſomething of Apparitions, well atteſted, in the Chriſtian Church. This often happen'd in the Infancy of Chriſtianity, occaſion'd chiefly by Heathen Powers triumphing in the Blood of its Profeſſors. A Martyrdom often produc'd an Apparition; and that as often work'd the Converſion of Thouſands. When a Saint had firſt bore its Teſtimony in the Flames, and after that return'd with a Commiſſion from the other World, 'twas then high Time for an Infidel to renounce his Country Gods, and to look up to the Saviour of Mankind. I can aſſure you, Madam, 'twas your Sex made that glorious Figure during thoſe hot Perſecutions; who were often diſtinguiſh'd from Heaven after their cruel Deaths; and were made the Inſtruments of conveying new Life to thoſe, who had taken away their own. 'Twas the great, the renown'd Potamiena, who was thus honour'd, after her Martyrdom, for the Good of Mankind, under the Emperor Severus; who was two Years in Great-Britain, about the Beginning of the third Century, and is ſaid to have died here of the Gout at York. The Sufferings of Potamiena, and her Appearance afterwards to Baſilides her Executioner, has no leſs Authority to ſupport it, than that of Euſebius, who was living ving about the latter End of the ſame Century; an Author, which I have had Occaſion to mention to you before: And it may be ſafely ſaid (as a late Prelate of our own expreſſes himſelf) that he is a Stranger to Euſebius, that knows him not to be as nice and curious in examining the Credit of his Authorities, as any the moſt critical Authors whatſoever. Now, Euſebius ſays [a], the Fact was much talk'd of by the Inhabitants, where Potamiena liv'd, even in his Time: She was in her Perſon very Beautiful; but yet more diſtinguiſh'd by her Chaſtity, in the many Repulſes which her hot Lovers met with; and a thouſand Hardſhips ſhe underwent for her Faith in Chriſt: After ſhe had ſuffer'd the moſt exquiſite Torments (frightful even to relate them) ſhe was at laſt Burnt with her Mother Marcella. When Potamiena was led to the Place of Execution, by Baſilides the proper Officer, and the Mob teazing and reviling with their filthy, obſcene Expreſſions; Baſilides puſh'd them off, and ſhew'd a great deal of Pity and Humanity to her. Potamiena taking kindly the Concern, that Baſilides had ſhewn for her, bade him take Courage; aſſuring him, that after her Death ſhe would petition her Lord and Saviour in his Behalf, and that he ſhould ſhortly be Rewarded for what he had done for her. Accordingly, ſoon after her Death, Baſilides being call'd upon, on ſome Account or other,

---

[a] Hiſt. Eccl. L. 6. C. 5.

other, to take an Oath, he averr'd, that 'twas by no Means lawful for him to take it; for he was a Chriſtian, and as ſuch he then declar'd himſelf. Thoſe who ſummon'd him thought at firſt, that he had been in Jeſt; but having perſiſted in it, he was carried before the Magiſtrate; and there acknowledging the Charge of being a Chriſtian, he was immediately laid in Irons. Some godly Brethren coming to him, and enquiring what might occaſion ſuch a ſudden and unexpected Change of Mind, he is ſaid to have reply'd, That Potamiena, three Days after her Martyrdom, ſtood by him at Night, putting a Crown on his Head, and letting him know, that ſhe had ſupplicated the Lord in his Behalf; that her Requeſt was anſwered, and that in a little Time he would be Happy. Baſilides made a glorious Confeſſion of his Faith, and had his Head ſever'd from his Body. And this occaſion'd the Converſion of many more among the People at Alexandria, induc'd thereto by the Appearance of Potamiena in a Viſion to Baſilides. The Viſion that Alexander had ſoon after, directing him to leave Cappadocia, and to repair to Jeruſalem, in order to be Biſhop of that Place, and the Brethren there having alſo a Viſion to the ſame Purpoſe, is atteſted by Euſebius in as ſtrong a Manner, as we can deſire any Part of Hiſtory to be. I will give it you, as briefly as I can. This Alexander had ſignaliz'd himſelf very much during the Perſecution; and God in his good Providence had wonderfully protected him: 'Twas now reveal'd

to

to him in a Viſion at Night, ſays Euſebius[a], that he ſhould go to Jeruſalem, and aſſiſt in the Biſhoprick then held by Narciſſus, who was a hundred and ſixteen Years old: The Brethren belonging to the Church at Jeruſalem had not only the like Revelation made to them; but ſome of them, who were the moſt obſerving, heard a diſtinct Voice, ſignifying that they ſhould go without the City, and there receive the Biſhop that God had appointed them. This they did with the common Approbation of the Biſhops belonging to the neighbouring Churches, and having thus receiv'd Alexander, they oblig'd him to continue amongſt them; and upon the Death of Narciſſus, Alexander became ſole Biſhop of Jeruſalem, as he was before Coadjutor in the ſame Office. But, perhaps, the moſt remarkable Apparition, that God appointed, during the ſeveral Perſecutions, was that which Gregory Biſhop of Neo-Cæſarea had in the third Century, upon his taking on him that weighty Office. I ſhall not venture to give you the Account itſelf, Madam, without premiſing ſome few Things; as well to introduce, as to eſtabliſh the Truth of ſo great an Event, that happen'd in the Primitive Church; Gregory's Parents were Heathens; but he having ſtudied at Alexandria, Athens, and other Places, came at laſt to Cæſarea, where he went through a Courſe of all the polite Parts of Learning under his great

---

[a] Lib. 6. C. 11.

Maſter Origen; with whom he lived about five Years; and during that Time was throughly inſtructed in the Principles of the Chriſtian Religion[a]: After this, Gregory's whole Life was one continued Scene of Wonders, which God enabled him to work in Confirmation of the Doctrine he profeſſed; and for that Reaſon, he has been diſtinguiſhed all along in the Chriſtian Church by the Names of Theodorus and Thaumaturgus. St. Baſil, who lived about the Middle of the next Century, ſpeaks thus of St. Gregory[b]: "When we conſider Gregory the Great, and "the Words which he ſpake; in what Claſs "ſhall we place him? Shall we not rank him "with the Apoſtles and Prophets? a Man who "walked with the ſame Spirit as they did; "who, without deviating, trod in the Steps of "thoſe Holy Men; and whoſe Life was con-"formable to the ſtricteſt Rules of the Goſpel. Gregory, Biſhop of Nyſſa, younger Brother of St. Baſil, is the Perſon that writes the Life of this great Man, Gregory Thaumaturgus; and (as a late eminent Prelate of our own has obſerved) [c] the Biſhop of Nyſſa was truly qualified for ſuch a Work, becauſe he was throughly acquainted with the Writings and Actions of St. Gregory. And now, Madam, I will venture to give you an Account of the Apparition to St. Gregory, as a Vid. Cave Hiſt. Lit.

---

b In Lib. de Spiritu Sancto, Cap. 29.

c Bulli Defenſio Fidei Nicænæ, Sect. 2. Cap. 12.

'tis

'tis in his Life, written by the Biſhop Nyſſa [a]; I think myſelf the more obliged to uſe this Caution, becauſe we live in an Age, wherein we but ſeldom hear of ſuch Things, from any Primitive Writers, in our own Language; or if we do, too many are apt ignorantly to cry out Popery, and then think, that's ſufficient to confute the Writer; though the Matter related, may, perhaps, have been ſeveral hundred Years before Popery was in being; and, conſequently, ſuch Declaimers do unwarily arraign the very Religion which they profeſs. The Account then, without any more Ceremony, is this: "When "Gregory Thaumaturgus had ſupplicated the "Almighty, that he might have a thorough "Knowledge given him of that Religion which "he was then going to preach; and one Night "being very thoughtful about his Paſtoral Of-"fice; what Method he ſhould take, in deli-"vering ſound Doctrine; as alſo what the ſeveral "Points were then controverted concerning the "bleſſed Trinity; he had thereupon a Revelati-"on made to him from Heaven: Nor, indeed (ſays Biſhop Bull) [b] ought it to appear incredible to any one, that a Thing of this Nature ſhould happen to a MAN, whoſe whole Life, as all Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorians, who mention him (and there are ſcarce any, but do) unanimouſly agree, was remarkably famous, as well for Revelations as

---

[a] Greg. Nyſſ. Opp. 3 Tom.

[b] Vide ut ſupra.

Miracles done by him. The Revelation then, made to St. Gregory, was in the Manner following: "There appeared to him, when awake, "one reſembling an old Man; in his Habit "auguſt and noble; venerable and graceful "in his Perſon, and of a pleaſing Aſpect; all "ſerving to expreſs the Dignity and Excellency "of the Man: Upon this, St. Gregory being "aſtoniſhed roſe from his Bed; wanting to "know who it might be, and upon what Ac-"count he came: The other, having firſt with "a low and ſubmiſſive Voice leſſened the Sur-"prize, and compoſed the Mind of St. Gregory, "told him, that he appeared, by the Appoint-"ment of the Almighty, on Account of thoſe "Matters, about which he had been heſita-"ting; that ſo the Truth might be manifeſted "to every pious Believer: This being ſaid, St. "Gregory took Courage, and look'd at him with "ſome Sort of Pleaſure, but yet amazed at the "ſame Time: After this, the Apparition ſtretch-"ing out his Hand directly forwards, and, as it "were, pointing out to ſomething that was on "the other Side; and St. Gregory turning his "Eyes accordingly, perceived another Appari-"tion under the Reſemblance of a Woman; "but ſeemingly ſuperior to any Mortal what-"ever. St. Gregory being again aſtoniſhed, and "looking downwards, was at a Loſs how to be-"have at ſuch a Sight, not being able to be-"hold the Apparition: And, what was farther "very ſurprizing in this Viſion, though 'twas "a very dark Night, there was a Light ſhining

"round

" round about thoſe who appeared, as if ſome " great Torch had been burning. Being then " unable to look on, he gave Attention to the " Diſcourſe that paſſed between the Perſons ſo " appearing, concerning what he wanted to " know; by which Means, he was not only " truly inſtructed in what related to his Faith, " but knew moreover by Name thoſe who ap- " peared to him; they addreſſing each other by " a proper Appellation: For he is ſaid to have " heard the Perſon, who appeared like a Woman, " exhorting the other under the Name of John " the Evangeliſt, to make manifeſt the Myſtery " of Godlineſs to one, who was yet a Novice " therein; the other replying, that he was rea- " dy to perform what was ſo agreeable to the " Mother of our Lord; and St. John having " made a ſuitable Diſcourſe to St. Gregory, " drawn into a narrow Compaſs, they both diſ- " appeared. St. Gregory immediately commit- " ted to writing the divine Inſtructions, that " were given him: By theſe he regulated all " the Sermons he afterwards preached; and " what he received from Heaven, he bequeathed " as a Legacy to Poſterity; agreeable to which, " the People of that Place (viz. Neo-Cæſarea) " are inſtructed to this very Day, and continue " Proof againſt all Heretical Pravity." This latter Part of the Account, Madam, was one Thing that weighed very much with Biſhop Bull [a],

---

[a] Vide ut ſupra.

The

The History is given us (says he) by that great Man (meaning the Bishop of Nyssa) in such a Manner, that no Man of Judgment can well doubt of it: For, he tells us, that the People of Neo-Cæsarea were instructed, to that very Day, in this Confession of Faith that Gregory Thaumaturgus had received; and that they continued free from all Manner of Heresy. He that has a Mind to be farther satisfied about this Matter (says the Bishop of Nyssa) let him hear the Church, where the Bishop of Neo-Cæsarea preached, and where these Things, under his own blessed Hand-writing are still preserved. You see, the very Hand-writing of Thaumaturgus is appealed to (says Bishop Bull) and that the People of Neo-Cæsarea had religiously preserved it till the Time that the Bishop of Nyssa wrote his Life. This Confession of Faith was received in the Church, as derived from Thaumaturgus, in the Time of St. Basil; and was admitted as such by all the Fathers in the fifth General Council. 'Tis related by St. Austin, in his Epistle to Paulinus, de Cura pro Mortuis, &c. that Fœlix one of the Martyrs, when the City of Nola in Italy was hard pressed by a rude barbarous Sort of People, appeared, not to one Person only, but to Numbers of the Citizens at once, being such of the Inhabitants, for whom formerly Fœlix had a great Respect; And St. Austin says, that he had unquestionable Authority for what he so relates [a]. The Vision that Con-

[a] Non incertis rumoribus, sed Testibus certis.

stantine

ſtantine had, though 'tis well known, and often talked of, yet I cannot paſs it over; conſidering 'tis ſo well atteſted by Euſebius, who tells us, that he had the Account from Conſtantine's own Mouth; Conſtantine appealing to Heaven for the Truth of what he was going to tell; and a little Time ſufficiently confirmed it [a]. The Account given by Euſebius, is as follows: "About three of the Clock in the Afternoon, "Conſtantine ſaid, that he ſaw, with his own "Eyes, a Pillar of Light in the Heavens in "the Faſhion of a Croſs, placed over the Sun, "whereon was an Inſcription, (Euſebius does "not ſay in what Language; but in the Greek, "which is the Language Euſebius writes in; "the Purport was) IN THIS OVERCOME. "Conſtantine was much ſtartled, and ſo was the "whole Army that beheld it. Conſtantine was "in doubt for ſome time, as he told me, what "might be the Meaning of this Appearance; "and whilſt he was muſing and reaſoning with "himſelf about it, Night came on; when our "Lord appeared to him in a Dream with the "Croſs in his Hand, charging him to make a "Standard, that ſhould reſemble what he had "ſo ſeen in the Heavens, and to have it born "before him, when he attacked his Enemies, "as an Enſign of Victory and Safety. Conſtan-"tine getting up early in the Morning, diſ-"cloſed the whole Affair to his Friends: and a Euſeb. L. 1. de Vita Conſt. C. 28. &c.

---

"call-

" calling his Goldſmiths and Jewellers together, " he ſits down amongſt them, and deſcribes the " Form of the Thing he would have made, " and gave ſtrict Orders that the Figure ſhould " be expreſſed with Gold and precious Stones; " and ſuch Standard, Euſebius ſays, he has ſome- " times ſeen himſelf. The Symbol, Madam, " was thus, as 'tis deſcrib'd by Euſebius at large; and we often meet with it in the Reverſe of the Roman Coins; the X. and the P ſtruck through the former, being the two firſt Letters of Chriſt's Name in Greek. I do aſſure you, Madam, this Letter would ſoon ſwell into a large Volume, ſhould I purſue the Subject I am now upon; but I ſhall not proceed any farther, unleſs you are pleaſed to require more of this Nature another Time. Give me Leave to reflect a while upon what has been ſaid already, and then to believe it Time to take my Leave. In the laſt Inſtance but one, 'tis expreſly ſaid, that 'twas done by the Appointment of the Almighty: But I neither learn from the Biſhop of Nyſſa the Relator, nor from any other Father of the Primitive Church, that it was the real Soul of the Virgin Mary, or of St. John the Evangeliſt that appeared; and therefore am rather inclined to account for ſuch Appearances, in the Manner St. Auſtin has ſuppoſed, and which, you may pleaſe

pleaſe to remember, I have already taken Notice of: And ſince we are aſſured, there are ſuch Numbers of miniſtring Spirits; why may we not ſuppoſe, that God in general may communicate his Mind to Mankind in that Way, when the Methods of his Providence upon any extraordinary Occaſions ſhall ſo require it, either by Dream, Viſion, or ſuch external Appearance? I remember St. Auſtin in another Place [a], Reaſons after this Manner; but does it with ſingular Modeſty: Nor would I offer it otherwiſe to you. He there ſays, when commenting upon that Paſſage in the Book of Geneſis, of God's talking with Man whom he had formed out of the Ground, " That, if we are " to underſtand it literally, it ſhould ſeem to " have been done by aſſuming a Human Shape [b]. " 'Tis true, ſays he, this is not expreſly laid " down in that Book: But that Circumſtance " of Speech; and moreover, Adam's being " ſaid to have heard the Voice of the Lord " walking in the cool of the Day, and to have " anſwered, I heard thy Voice and hid myſelf " from thy Face becauſe I was naked, ſeem to " imply as much: Nor do I ſee, ſays St. Auſtin, " how theſe Expreſſions can be taken in a li- " teral Senſe, without admitting a Human " Likeneſs. It cannot well be ſaid, that there " was a Voice only, and nothing elſe; becauſe " He is ſaid to have walked; and if walking, a Lib. 2. de Trin. C. 10.

---

b In ſpecie Hominis videtur Deus cum Homine tunc locutus.

" then viſible, in ſuch Manner as Adam might " be ſaid to hide himſelf. St. Auſtin is there " conſidering a Queſtion put, concerning the " Trinity; and ſays, He made all Things by " his Word; which WORD we know, as a ſure " Article of our Faith, to be his only Son. If " God the Father did ſpeak to the firſt Man A- " dam; walk in the Garden; and the Sinner hid " himſelf from his Face; why may not He be " underſtood to have appeared to Abraham and " Moſes and others, and in what Manner he " pleaſed, by a Creature changeable and viſible, " made ſubject to his Will and Pleaſure, though " He himſelf in his Nature inviſible, and un- " changeable?

I juſt hinted, as you obſerve, at the Beginning of this Letter, that Angels, both good and bad, do unqueſtionably ſerve the Purpoſes of an all-wiſe and infinite Being; that they do not only communicate by Dreams and Viſions, but are enabled to cloath themſelves with ſome Ætherial or Aerial Subſtance, and to aſſume the Likeneſs of Perſons, that are departed, and gone to their eternal Reſt; tho' the Manner of it be as much above the Reach of Man's Underſtanding, as the Union of his own Body and Soul is: And, I hope, Madam, the Account I have given you from the Heathen and Chriſtian World, ſupported by the beſt Authorities in each, may have ſerv'd to make good what I then advanc'd. But after all; will not ſome Perſons be apt to tell you, (I know they will) will) that this Letter may poſſible prove a pretty Amuſement; but that the Facts related are all owing to the Depravation of the Human Senſes? I eaſily imagine one Gentleman, who often waits on you, and is very adroit in this Sort of Reaſoning, repreſenting to you, that there is Abundance of Melancholly in ſome Conſtitutions; Choler very aduſt in others; Frenſies; Fevers; and a general Imbecillity, whether natural or accidental, in Human Bodies; and that this is the Reaſon, that Men and Women imagine many Things that are not; that beſides, there is a great deal of Superſtition rooted in the Minds of moſt People, and requires Time and Pains to correct it by good Senſe and Argument; which otherwiſe is apt to draw us into the Belief of Things that are not true: However, he tells you, as uſual, that one Thing is certainly to be laid down as true, viz. That nothing can appear to Men, that exceeds or goes beyond the Powers of Nature. Roundly affirm'd! But, Madam, when we come to talk of Nature ſeriouſly, we are as much puzzled about it (with that Gentleman's Leave) as we are about the Manner of good and bad Angels aſſuming Ætherial or Aerial Subſtances. And therefore if he believes, that there is One, who commands Nature; and that almoſt every Thing in Nature is calculated more for our Admiration than Comprehenſion; why ſhould it be any Objection, if he cannot comprehend ſuch a Way or Manner of the ſame infinite Being's communicating his Will to Mankind? We often act the Philoſopher in talking of Gravity; and yet 'tis a Thing, we ſtill find ſurpaſſes all the Powers of meer Nature, and all the Mechaniſm of Matter: No Part of Matter can be the Cauſe of its own Gravity; no more than it can be the Cauſe of the Gravity of another Body. Deſ-Cartes, who in the laſt Age was reckoned the great Maſter of a Mechanical Hypotheſis, does not ſuppoſe or admit of any ſpecifical Difference in Matter [a]: Nor can any one well imagine otherwiſe, but that all the Matter of the World is of one Kind, as to its Eſſence. Here then our Underſtandings are manifeſtly at a Loſs about Motion; and we then ſhew ourſelves to have moſt Reaſon, when we have Recourſe to the Author of Nature; acknowledging, that this is a Power, which he has reſerved in his own Hands; Gravity being the main Engine whereby the Univerſe is managed and ſupported, and is principally concerned in the moſt remarkable Phænomena of the natural World. Indeed, Madam, there's hardly any Thing occurs in Nature, but ſerves to remind us of our Ignorance of Things here below, and therefore how little qualified to judge of Things above. One Drop of Water only, may convince us, if we pleaſe: And (what the Gentleman, perhaps, may be ſtartled at) let that Drop of Water be well conſider'd; the more he uſes his Senſe and Reaſon in the Matter, the more he will find his Under-

---

[a] Princip. Philoſ. Part 2. S. 22, 23.

ſtanding ſtanding foil'd; for the Microſcope, the more it enlarges the Sight, the greater Trouble it gives to the rational Faculties in accounting for the Diſcoveries that are made. The Microſcope, indeed, tells us, or, rather our capacious Souls know it to be true) that there are living Creatures in the Water many Millions of Times ſmaller in Bulk than a ſmall viſible Sand a. By an eaſy Calculation 'tis found, that there are not leſs than twenty ſeven Millions of ſuch Animals to make the Bulk of one ſmall Grain of Sand: But then, when we come to reaſon upon this Matter, that has been ſo artificially conveyed to us; in what Confuſion are our poor Souls, upon the Concluſions that are to be drawn, and the Aſſent that is to be given by us? Each of theſe little Creatures muſt be allow'd to have Organs or Inſtruments of ſome Kind or other fit to produce the Motion with which they are endow'd: Theſe Organs muſt be made up of Veins, Arteries or Veſſels, to convey Nouriſhment to them, and in Sinews or Strings by which they may ſtir and move: It muſt be farther granted, that the Water muſt find its Paſſage by theſe Veſſels, and conſequently the Particles of Water muſt be conſiderable ſmaller than theſe Veſſels; and ſince the whole Animal itſelf is but ſcarcely viſible, we muſt farther conclude, that ſuch Veſſels muſt

---

a See Mr. Leuwenhoek's Letter, among the Philoſophical Experiments of Dr. Rob. Hooke, publiſh'd by Mr. Derham, Page 55.

be wholly inviſible, and much more, the Parts of Water that move in them: And upon the Whole, we have Reaſon to think, that as Microſcopes will never help us ſo far, as to diſcover and diſtinguiſh the Particles of which Water does conſiſt; ſo that the Almighty, had he deſign'd us for ſuch curious Searches into the Works of his Hands, would have given us Senſes much more refin'd for that Purpoſe, than what he has heen pleas'd to allot us. I am perſuaded, Madam, this Argument will have its due Weight with you, however it may fail with other; being well aſſured that your Knowledge extends to Things, as well natural as divine; and if our Notions of Things material are thus manifeſtly ſo very imperfect, and the Phænomena in the Terreſtrial World are found not to lie level with our own ſcanty Reaſon, why are Things relating to the Cæleſtial World to be called in Queſtion? I will only obſerve, that the Lucians of the preſent Age take much the ſame Method as their Maſter did; who, in Oppoſition to the moſt renown'd Philoſophers of his Time, could find no better Argument againſt Apparitions in general than this, viz. I don't believe them: Becauſe I only amongſt you all did never ſee any of them; and as for the Reſt, 'twas put off with a Jeſt. But a Jeſt, without an Argument, will do no great Miſchief: And ſuch Gentlemen ſhould be often reminded of the Inference, which the Roman Orator draws, where he is arguing about Things of this Nature, viz. I am fully apprized, ſays he, that theſe Matters

may

may be had in Contempt, and made the Subject of Ridicule and Buffoon'ry: But, then ſuch Perſons ought to know, that the very Reaſon why they act ſo, is, becauſe they don't believe in any ſuperior Being; and conſequently make light of every Thing that is communicated from the other World [a]. I have often wonder'd, how the Sadducees could deny the Being of Angels and Spirits, (as we read in the Goſpel they did) ſince Moſes ſo often makes mention of them, and of appearing to Mankind; I do therefore, for my own Part, take the Sadducees to have been a complaiſant Sort of Atheiſts, who outwardly paid a Regard to ſome Parts of the Jewiſh Religion on Account of the People, but no otherwiſe: And this is the Reaſon, that Juſtin Martyr, in his Dialogue with Trypho the Jew, does not reckon the Sadducees in the Number of the Jews, but reputed them as Hereticks, not allowing them any Place in the Jewiſh Church. And Celſus, who was a Sort of an Epicurean, copy'd exactly after the Sadducees (as may be ſeen in Origen, who there anſwers him) making a Jeſt of Angels and the Reſurrection; and generally of all thoſe Apparitions, which are mentioned both in the Old and New Teſtament. The true Reaſon then, Madam, why we are at a Loſs in framing any Notion of Spirit, is, becauſe our Souls are ſo immerſed in a Hæc poſſe contemni, vel etiam rideri, præclare intelligo: Sed id ipſum eſt, Deos non putare: Quæ ab iis ſignificantur, contemnere. Cic. Lib. 1. de Divin.

---

Matter

Matter themſelves: But then, if the Difficulty of framing a Conception of a Thing, be any juſt Argument againſt the Exiſtence of the Thing itſelf; we muſt ſoon queſtion the very Being of our own Souls; becauſe their being united with our Bodies, as I have hinted already, is what we can form no Notion of here; we muſt moreover queſtion, you ſee, what our Microſcope tells us is true in the material World, becauſe we cannot comprehend it; nay, if this Sort of Argument is to be allowed of, there will be nothing but Spirit, and no ſuch Thing as a Body left in the World: for Extenſion of Matter has ſo many Difficulties attending it, when we come to reaſon truly about it, that our Definition of Body is lame and imperfect; and when we once talk of finite and infinite Diviſion, our Heads turn giddy; we run into Abſurdities on either Side of the Queſtion, and nothing is left us to exiſt, by ſuch Argument, but the very Being that reflects within us. There is then great Reaſon to affirm, that ſuch who entertain a Diſbelief of Spirits, becauſe they cannot underſtand, what immaterial Beings are, do unhappily entertain a Notion, that leads to all Manner of Irreligion and Prophaneneſs: For, when we have once baniſhed the Belief of incorporeal Beings out of the World by ſuch Sort of reaſoning; what is this, but carrying us on to the dethroning of the ſupreme Spirit or Father of all? Let ſuch then talk of their Belief in God; the Human Soul; Angels and Devils; and of the Holy Scriptures too, which declare declare theſe Things to our Faith; yet if they will otherwiſe diſcard immaterial Beings, becauſe they cannot frame a Notion of them; they are only giving the great Creator an empty Name, an inſignificant Attribute, and, in Reality, believing and ſpeaking they know not what. I am pretty ſure, there are many, who are not ſufficiently aware of the fatal and pernicious Conſequences of this Sadducean Principle; who are apt to think, they may very ſafely deny the Exiſtence of Spirits, and yet that the Being of God is no Ways affected by ſuch a Denial; for God, they argue, might be without ſuch immaterial Subſtances, as He was certainly before them: Nay, God, ſay they, had been God, though he had not been a Creator. Thus the hardy Deiſt, to avoid the Force of Revelation, finds himſelf obliged to propagate his Poiſon; but this muſt end in real Atheiſm: For thoſe that will not bluntly ſay, There is no God; when they argue in this Manner, do really eſtabliſh no other God, than what Epicurus and his Followers did; and that I muſt ever think, amounts to real Atheiſm: But, if St. Paul is to be hearkened to; (and why ſhould the Deiſt refuſe it?) the inviſible Things of him from the Creation of the World are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the Things that are made, even his eternal Power and Godhead, ſo that they are, or (that they may be) without Excuſe a. When a Rom. i. 20. εἰς τὸ εἶναι αὐτὸς ἀναπολογήτους.

we talk of a Spirit then, as Chriſtians, Madam, we talk of it in Oppoſition to ſuch Bodies as we now carry about us; in the Senſe, as our Saviour directs his Diſciples to underſtand it, when they ſuppoſed they had ſeen a Spirit: Handle me and ſee, for a SPIRIT hath not Fleſh and Bones, as ye ſee me have[a]. The Diſciples were not ignorant, how frequent Apparitions were under the Jewiſh Diſpenſation; nor does our Saviour there give the leaſt Intimation, that they were not to expect the Continuance of them under the Goſpel: But rather corrects the groſs Notions, which in a Fright they had conceived in that Matter: A Spirit hath not Fleſh and Bones; but yet it may have ſuch an Ætherial or Aerial Vehicle, as may in other Reſpects ſerve to repreſent a Perſon as convincingly to our Senſes, as if it had ſuch a real Body, to which our Souls are here united. Thus much, I think, may fairly be concluded from our Saviour's Words; and nothing more is deſired to be granted: For, as to the Manner, how Spirits may be united to ſuch Vehicles, our Notions about that, are nothing more intricate, perplext or difficult, than thoſe are, which the ableſt Philoſophers can give us either of their own Soul and Body, or of the Body in general. The honourable and renowned Mr. Robert Boyle, did unqueſtionably know as much, if not more, of the Powers of Nature, than any Man whatever: And yet his Knowledge was not more extenſive, than 'twas uſeful and ſerviceable to Religion. With what Piety does he reflect, in all his Recherches; adoring that infinite Spirit that once moved upon the Waters; confeſſing the Myſtery, how God, the moſt ſimple and pure Spirit can act upon Matter; and how the Soul and Body work upon and affect each other? This learned Gentleman was well known to be a Perſon, by no Means credulous in the Affair of Apparitions; and yet a Co-temporary of his, an eminent Author, Dr. Henry More in his Collection of Philoſophical Writings, aſſures us, that Mr. Boyle, whilſt at Geneva, was thoroughly convinced of the Truth of that Relation which he there had of a Houſe at Maſcon in Burgundy haunted in a very terrible Manner. Mr. Perreand, whoſe Houſe it was, gave Mr. Boyle, at Geneva, a Copy of his Book, which he was going to print concerning the Affair. The learned du Moulin, in his Preface to Mr. Perreand's Book, ſays, "That this familiar Converſation of the Devil was not in a Corner, or in "a Deſart (where the Melancholly of Witches is ſuppoſed to make them fancy they converſe with him) but in the midſt of a great "City, in a Houſe where there was daily a "great Reſort to hear him ſpeak, and where "Men of contrary Religions met together; "whoſe Proneneſs to caſt a Diſgrace upon the "diſſenting Parties did occaſion the narrow examining and full confirming the Truth thereof, both by the Magiſtrate and by the Dio-

---

a Luke xxiv. 39.

ever:

" ceſan of the Place. Mr. Boyle had the Opportunity, as well of enquiring after Mr Perreand the Relator, as concerning the ſeveral Paſſages in his Book; and yet (to uſe the Words of Dr. More) Mr. Boyle was ſo well ſatisfied, that he profeſſes, that all his ſettled Indiſpoſedneſs to believe ſtrange Things was overcome by this ſpecial Conviction. I ſhould not, Madam, have given you any modern Inſtance of Things of this Nature, had it not been introduced by ſo great a Name as that of Mr. Boyle; who ever thought it unreaſonable to diſclaim any certain Truth, becauſe our Faculties are found not ſufficient to comprehend it. He has given ſufficient Demonſtration in his Writings, how readily he believed St. Paul, where he talks of ſpiritual Bodies [a]; and I cannot ſee any Thing amiſs, if thoſe Words of St. Paul were tranſlated, ſuch Bodies as Spirits or Angels have. 'Tis certain, we ſee through a Glaſs darkly, when we talk of thoſe Expreſſions of St. Paul relating to the Change of our Bodies: We ſhall all be changed; as well ſuch, as are aſleep, as ſuch who ſhall be alive at the Coming of our Lord; but then St. Paul bids us obſerve, that this mighty Change is a Myſtery: There will ſtill be our Body; but then 'twill be a Body in Contradiſtinction to what we tranſlate a natural Body [b]: Our Bodies will be pure and refined; and a Σώματα πνευματικά, 1 Cor. xv. 44.

---

b Σῶμα ψυχικόν.

theſe

theſe are the ſpiritual Bodies, ſays the Apoſtle: And our Saviour tells us [a], when ſuch Bodies ſhall be given, we ſhall be as the Angels which are in Heaven.

All I ſhall add, is, an Account which I myſelf had, ſome Years ago, from a very ingenious Gentleman, a Member of Parliament for ſome Part of North Britain; being ſome of the Diſcourſe, with which I and others were entertained in a Stage Coach. He aſſured me, that a Widow, a Tenant of his in North Britain, and who had a great many Children to provide for, did appear to him one Night, when he was in Bed at his Lodgings in Pell-Mell near St. James's; that the Widow let him know, that ſhe was dead; but was very importunate with him, that he would take Care of the great Family ſhe had left behind her; that he having conſented to what was requeſted, ſhe immediately ſqueezed him (as he thought) about one of his Wriſts; that a Brother Member of Parliament calling on him the next Morning to go to the Houſe; he related to him, as he was getting out of Bed, what had happened to him in the Night, and occaſioned his lying longer than ordinary; the Story (he ſaid) at firſt made his Friend very merry: But looking upon that Wriſt which he thought the Woman ſqueezed ſo hard, and obſerving, together with his Friend, a black Spot on either Side of it, not leſs in [a] Mark xii. 25.

---

Circum-

Circumference than a Sixpence; they both began to think and talk of the Matter very ſeriouſly: The Gentleman aſſured me, that he ſhewed thoſe black Spots to Hundreds of People; that the Spots daily decreaſed, and ſo continued on till he had his Letters from North Britain; by which he learnt that the Widow died the ſame Night that ſhe appeared to him in Pell-Mell; that ſhe expired with the ſame Concern for her Children, and lamented the Abſence of her Landlord; and he farther aſſured me and the Company, that he was fully convinced of ſuch Apparition; and that he did accordingly take Care of the Widow's Children. There are many now living, to whom I have given this Account, as well as to yourſelf: I hope, a kind Providence may ſoon permit me to ſend you two or three Letters more on the remaining Subjects; when I ſhall be ſo happy as to learn, that this has given you any Satisfaction: or that 'tis like to anſwer the End you propoſed; which I am well aſſured, was to do Service to Religion: And I can aver, with the greateſt Sincerity; 'tis with the ſame View, that the Commands you laid on me have been ſo chearefully obeyed by,

MADAM,

Your very Humble Servant.